Faithfully yours,

THE GOVERNOR'S LETTER IN TUCKER CASE.

Fac-simile of note to William Peel, in which His Excellency promises careful consideration of the Page murder before rendering his final decision.

TUCKER CLINGS TO HOPE

ON VERGE OF COLLAPSE

Condemned Youth, Breaking Down Under Strain of Awful Ordeal, Places Last Hope in Governor—Removal to Death Cell Expected to Take Place at Any Moment Now.

"I believe Governor Guild will save me."

This statement was made by Charles Louis Tucker in the East Cambridge jail to-day to Thomas F. Vahey of his counsel as the young man waited in a highly nervous condition for the summons at any moment to be removed to the death cell in the Charlestown Prison.

Tucker was laboring under great emotion. He had been visited by both James H. Vahey and his brother, Thomas F. Vahey, at different times to-day, and they had done what they could to cheer him. He tried, the lawyers declared, to be brave.

TUCKER NEAR COLLAPSE.

But the tremendous strain is telling on him. He has lost in weight noticeably within the past few weeks. His voice is unsteady and his lips tremble as he talks. Tears fill his eyes in spite of his efforts to keep them back.

"I know that my position is serious," that death may be only a few days off," Tucker told Thomas F. Vahey. "I can think of nothing else. I have thought of what you and your brother have told me about the Governor. You have told me that he is a fair man. You have said that he would not do an injustice to any one.

"I have thought it over—day and night. I have gone over every word you told me about the Governor. I think he is just the kind of man who will save me. I believe he will save me. I have not given up hope—I never will give up hope."

SHRINKS FROM DEATH CELL.

Tucker shrinks in horror from the death cell. He recalls at the idea of entering the grim prison, where the best he can hope for are long, dreary, heart-breaking days—the days and years of a life convict.

Thomas F. Vahey entered the prison in East Cambridge at 10:30 to-day and remained about twenty minutes with Tucker. He said that neither he nor Tucker knew just when he would be taken to the Charlestown prison.

"It looks to me as though it would be to-day," said Mr. Vahey. "I do not know, however. Tucker is prepared for the removal. He is exerting all the courage he possesses to keep up."

The Rev. Thomas W. Bishop of the Appleton Episcopal Church of Dorchester, who knew Tucker when he was a small boy in Auburndale, had a long talk yesterday with the prisoner. Tucker asked him to act as his spiritual adviser after he reaches the Charlestown prison. It was the Rev. Mr. Bishop who declared that Tucker is gradually breaking down.

"Tucker did not confess," said the clergyman, "nor did he give any intimation of such a thing."

Then Rev. Mr. Bishop made this significant remark:

"There are certain conditions which surrounded the boy during his early days which, in the event of his death, I think I may duty to make public, but at this time I cannot do so."

"Do you believe he is guilty?" asked the reporter.

"That is a question I cannot answer, as it is not in my province."

Tucker's lawyers are working night and day preparing for the hearing on Tuesday, when they will present new evidence that they hope will induce the Governor to commute his sentence to life imprisonment.

In the meantime Governor Guild is receiving numerous letters threatening him with bodily and political harm unless he saves the young man's life. The Governor is also receiving many other letters in which the writers urge him to do his duty without fear of the result.

Mr. Vahey is understood to be on the trail of information which will end all doubt on the ownership of the stickpin by Mabel Page, which the prosecution asserted at the trial, and which will attach the responsibility of other testimony which it is believed had much to do with the verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree returned by the jury.

While Mr. Vahey was absent, Charles H. Innes consulted Governor Guild on the question of whether some of the prominent signers of the petition for commutation would be permitted to urge their views at the hearing before the Governor and Judges Sheldon and Sherman which the Governor has fixed for Tuesday next at 11 a. m. Mr. Innes asked permission to have some thirty or forty of the signers of the petition address the Governor.

WISH TO FAVOR TUCKER.

Several persons who have been conspicuous in the agitation of the Tucker petition wish to urge favorable action upon Governor Guild. Among them are Rev. William J. Winslow and C. H. Fiske of Weston, an attorney.

Governor Guild has responded to this request by a letter to Vahey, Innes and Mansfield, as follows:

"I have considered the request of Mr. Innes over the telephone that some thirty or forty signers of the petition favoring the commutation of the sentence of Charles L. Tucker be selected and invited to appear

STATE POLICE WILL NOW HUNT BRIBE FACTS

EVIDENCE GIVEN BEFORE RULES COMMITTEE TURNED OVER TO-DAY BY GOVERNOR.

Governor Curtis Guild took official cognizance of the bribery scandals in the Legislature to-day, when he turned all the evidence taken thus far before the committee over to the State police for investigation.

The transcript of the testimony to date, bound into a volume, was turned over by the Committee on Rules to the Governor last night. Governor Guild evidently believed, after scanning it, that it contained evidence sufficient to warrant the carrying out of the suggestion, made by committee members, that Chief Shaw's department of district police be asked to investigate the bribery, with especial reference to the fund that was raised to defeat the anti-bucket shop bill.

Captain W. Harry Proctor was summoned before the Governor to-day, and the evidence was placed in his hands. Neither at the Governor's office nor at the office of the State police will anyone tell what the detectives are expected to do with it. The only one to the police to be followed appears in a publication recognized as a mouthpiece for the administration, which says:

To Ignore Charges.

The State police will unravel the secret of the alleged "bribery" if anybody can. If there was such a fund, the police will be able, before they have finished their work, to say how large it was and who had charge of it. If there was no such fund, if the cry of whole cloth, the police report will charges of its existence were made out show that.

This statement, appearing in so semi-official a way, accompanied, as it was, by another statement that not more than one or two members of the Legislature are under suspicion, may be taken to indicate that the official policy is to be the whitewashing of the wholesale charges, and that the fifty members who were on the letter list regarding which at least one Representative has testified before the committee, are to go scot-free.

After administering the "immunity bath" to two members of the Legislature to-day, leaving but three more to take the treatment, the House committee on Rules had before it three lobbyists—"Bob" Southworth, "Jack" Fleming and Charles Walker, of Lynn. Another member of the lobby summoned did not appear before adjournment for luncheon was Timothy J. Barter.

Lobbyists Questioned.

Southworth, who is in charge of the Boston & Maine lobby at the State House, was the first member of the third house to go before the committee. He was in the room from 12:30 to 11:55 o'clock. When he emerged, he said:

"The committee asked me how I did business up here. They also asked me what I knew about the anti-bucket shop bill. I told them I had no connection with that bill, nor with any other bill where money was improperly used at the State House."

Charles Walker, a minor lobbyist, was before the committee from 11:55 until 12:12. "They did not ask me anything about my methods of work," he said when he came out.

"Were you asked anything about the anti-bucket shop bill?"

"Yes, but, unfortunately, I could give them no information. I had nothing to do with that bill."

Fleming in Great Hurry.

"Jack" Fleming, one of the most notorious lobbyists on Beacon Hill, who did the active work in the defeat of the everytime bill, and who sits frequently inside the members' railing in the Senate, went into the committee room when Walker came out. He was before the committee thirty-six minutes.

When he came out he seemed to be in a great hurry to go away.

Waving his hand at the reporters, as he rushed away, he said: "I'm in a big hurry—I'm sorry—no information—nothing to say."

The committee went into session at 11:13 o'clock, and at once proceeded to administer the usual "immunity bath" to two additional members of the Legislature, Representatives Grant and McManmon. When these members came out of the room, they declined to give any information as to whether they had added to the committee's knowledge of the situation.

There now remains but three members of the House yet to be heard—Representatives Egan and Coyle of Boston and Totten of North Attleboro.

Had Little to Offer.

During the examination of Messrs. Grant and McManmon, Timothy J. Barter of Boston arrived at the committee room. He said he had been summoned, and that he understood his name had been given the committee by Senator Logan, who thought he might be able to give the committee information as to the methods adopted to kill the Senator's anti-bucket shop bill. Mr. Barter said he was not familiar with any methods of the sort, however, and would be unable to give any information as to the matter.

A clerk in the office of "Bob" Southworth, who is head of the Boston & Maine Railroad lobby at the State House, was near the door of the committee room. He decided to reporters that his employer had been summoned. While he was making his decision a messenger came to the door and said that the committee wished all who had been summoned to come inside the anteroom. At this the clerk hurried down the corridor and found Southworth talking in the midst of a group of Representatives. The lobbyist broke away from his legislative friends and came at once to the committee room, which he entered.

He was soon followed by Mr. Walker, and a few minutes later "Jack" Fleming arrived and entered.

Alfonso's Life Saved by Order on Breast; PIECE OF BOMB HIT KING

Chain of Portuguese Decoration That He Wore Was Broken by Flying Fragment.

General Weyler, the "Butcher of Cuba," Dangerously Injured by Explosion.

MADRID, June 1.—Defying the Anarchists who attempted to assassinate him and his bride yesterday, King Alfonso and Queen Victoria motored through the streets of Madrid in an automobile without escort. Crowds lined the streets and the young monarchs were loudly cheered all along their way.

This ride was taken by the King against the advice of his ministers and despite the fact that threatening letters were received in government quarters last night after the attempted assassination. These letters, it is asserted, said that the unsuccessful attempt would not be the last, as the conspirators had declared their intention to persevere until they succeeded in their purpose.

The report has been confirmed that the King was struck in the breast by a flying fragment of the bomb that was hurled at him and his Queen, and that he was saved from injury and possibly death by one of the many decorations he wore.

The fragment of bomb struck the chain of the Portuguese Order of Santiago which he wore, breaking it. It stopped the splinter, however, and prevented it from entering the King's breast.

Among those who were injured by the explosion of the bomb was General Weyler, "The Butcher of Cuba" was dangerously hurt, and it is feared that he will not recover.

Information received by Anarchists in London shows that the bomb which killed sixteen persons and injured over fifty was the second attempt made during the day to kill the King.

Bomb Thrown at Church.

The first attempt was made in front of the Church of San Geronimo, as the royal pair were leaving. A bomb was thrown, but it failed to explode. Don Jose, a notorious Continental desperado, threw the bomb.

The London Evening Standard, which printed a story on Wednesday giving details of a plot upon the life of Alfonso, to-day publishes an alleged telegram from Anarchists in Madrid to the London headquarters, which says:

"Unfortunately the men placed in front of the church were unable to execute the task. Don Jose threw a bomb which failed to explode. We were afraid our plans were spoiled for a moment."

Comment is made in regard to the "men placed in front of the church," and it is pointed out that they probably received tickets admitting them to that strictly guarded position through the machinations of military co-conspirators.

High Officials in Plot.

In the arrest of Manuel Duran, the man charged with hurling the fatal bomb, the Madrid police believe that they have secured the first link in a chain of evidence which will strike at many in powerful

OLD 12 O'CLOCK BILL IS SENT BACK TO GUILD

WILL RECEIVE HIS VETO, BUT DEMOCRATS SAY IT HAS FORCE OF LAW.

On motion of Senator Lane of Boston, chairman of the committee on liquor law, the Senate to-day voted to direct the clerk to return to Governor Guild the so-called original 12 o'clock law. The rest of the plan is for the Governor to veto the bill when it comes to him, which he will do.

Democratic Senators claim that, on matter what action the Governor may take with the bill, it has really become a law. The bill provides that cities of 45,000 population shall have the right to say, on a referendum vote, whether or not liquor may be sold by hotels, in public dining rooms, to guests, from 11 o'clock at night to midnight.

Refused to Sign It.

Under pressure from the temperance people Governor Guild refused to sign the bill on the ground that it was the entering wedge for a "wide-open Massachusetts." At his suggestion Senator Lane moved that the bill be recalled, but, when he tried to bring it before the Senate on a motion to reconsider the enacting clause, Senator Mahoney of Chicopee objected, and, as unanimous consent was required, the attempt failed. President Dana ordered Clerk Coolidge to hold the bill until he should direct its return to the Governor. In the meantime, a new 12 o'clock bill, affecting Boston alone, was introduced at the Governor's suggestion, and passed and signed.

The constitution gives the Governor only a five day limit to hold bills unsigned, after which they have the force of law. Under that article of the constitution, it is claimed by Senators McLeod of Cambridge, Cusick of Boston, Cassidy of North Adams and Mahoney of Chicopee that the first bill became a law.

To Appeal to Courts.

Senator Lane admits there is a grave question of the standing of the first bill, and a number of lawyers who have been consulted by senators say the first bill became a law five days after it went to the Governor, the recall by the Senate being of no contrary effect, inasmuch as the Senate refused to receive the bill formally on the motion to reconsider.

It is understood that hotel keepers of Worcester and Springfield will ask to have the question settled by the courts.

U. S. SENATORS TO BE UNSEATED AT ONCE

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Reed Smoot, other motion was that the recommendation should be that he be expelled. All this motion the committee divided evenly 6 to 6.

Senator from Utah, has been declared by the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections to be not entitled to his seat in the United States Senate.

This decision was reached at a meeting of the committee to-day by a vote of 7 to 5. Chairman Burrows was authorized to prepare a report to the Senate, which he will do at the earliest possible moment.

Two votes were then taken on the question as to the course of action the committee would recommend. One of these was on the proposition that Smoot should be expelled. That was voted down. The

At the same meeting Senator Bailey offered a resolution for the expulsion from the Senate of Senator Burton of Kansas. The consideration of the resolution was postponed until next Tuesday, when a special meeting of the committee will be held at 11:30 a. m.

Burton was convicted of using his influence in behalf of government contractors, and his sentence of imprisonment and fine was recently affirmed by the United States Supreme Court.

ROOSEVELT TO SEND BEEF EXPOSE TO CONGRESS MONDAY

TO BARE THE HORRORS OF PACKINGTOWN

McNeill-Reynolds Report Will Be Given in Full to People's Representatives.

PRESIDENT'S MIND IS FIRM

WASHINGTON, June 1.—It is officially announced at the White House to-day that the President will send to Congress the Neill-Reynolds report on the Chicago packing houses, probably Monday.

34 CONVICTED IN BOSTON OF OFFENCES AGAINST MEAT LAWS

The unspeakable conditions of the packing houses in Chicago are of the greatest moment in Boston. Within the last few months there have been thirty-four dealers in and about Boston who have been convicted of the same awful offences that have startled the whole country.

Reporters of the BOSTON AMERICAN visited the packing places in this city. With the exception of the Brighton abbatoir they were asked to inspect the plants.

The plants that were seen were clean. But the charge of uncleanliness is one of the small features in the revelations that have been made in connection with the Chicago places.

And uncleanliness had nothing to do with the conviction of thirty-four dealers by the Boston Board of Health that has been made in this city.

"Embalmed" Beef Sold.

That the citizens of Boston and New England have been buying and eating the vile products that are put up in the way of meats in various forms in Chicago will come as a shock to the people interested.

Everybody in Boston and in New England believed that this section of the country was so far removed from the avarice of beef packers that at least their food would have a chance of being untainted.

But the Health Board found in one months that at least eight concerns were selling what is known as "embalmed beef."

Dealers in this city, in Chelsea, in Springfield, were found who have been guilty of identically the same crime that is charged against the packers of Chicago. Dealers in New Bedford and Holyoke were found guilty.

How far this crime has been perpetrated right here at home is something it will take time to tell. The Board of Health is now investigating now. They have a lot of facts that will result in every business of the illegitimate order being closed.

The matter has got to a point where the Chicago packers will either have to go out of business in Massachusetts or else revise their methods. The same thing is true of some local manufacturers of ice dealers in meat products.

Chemist Leach of the State Board has proof that oysters, pickled with boric acid, hamburg steak preserved with sulphite of soda, eggs preserved with formaldehyde, sausage preserved with borax, and other meat products with sulphurous acid, have been sold in this State lately.

Not all of this business by any means can be charged to the Chicago packers either. A number of local concerns have been found guilty. In Boston the vigilance of the Health Board has balked the business in "embalmed" meats. But outside of this city it still flourishes, as much if not more than the business in the meat trust's chemically treated products.

GRINDING SAUSAGE MEAT AT SQUIRE'S PACKING HOUSE IN EAST CAMBRIDGE.
PHOTOGRAPH BY BOSTON AMERICAN STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER.

In this establishment every precaution is taken to safeguard hygienic and clean conditions. Nothing but the wholesome scraps of meat left in the cutting of pork for the market is used for the sausage meat, and so healthful and inviting are the surroundings and ingredients that sightseers, who are always welcome to the packing house, eagerly accept the general invitation to sample the products.

FRANCE MAY BAR CHICAGO MEAT AS RESULT OF EXPOSE

PARIS, June 1.—Chicago meat will be barred out of France if the object of yesterday's meeting of the League of Public Hygiene, backed by several scores of French packers, can be attained. The league expects at least to get the government to inaugurate a new system of inspection, which will prevent tainted meat from entering the country.

A French emissary, it appears, visited the stockyards in Chicago and obtained employment for a year, as French correspondence clerk. According to his testimony, no meat coming from Chicago can be eaten with safety.

In general, the French public is inclined to be cynical as to all this agitation, seeing in it only manoeuvres on the part of the home producers, although the leaders of the movement show, at least to their own satisfaction, that selfish interests have nothing to do with their action in the matter.

"I am sure you will appreciate the necessity of this ruling in regard to the hearing on Tuesday."

WILL REVEAL FACTS SHOULD TUCKER DIE

The Rev. Thomas W. Bishop of the Appleton Methodist church of Dorchester, who called on Charles L. Tucker at the jail yesterday, declares that should Tucker die, he will have a revelation to make. Dr. Bishop has known Tucker for years, and was once his pastor. He does not declare Tucker to be innocent, nor does he declare him to be guilty.

Whatever the mysterious statement may be, it is certain that Dr. Bishop will not make known a word of the secret he carries unless Tucker goes to his death according to the letter of the law.

Dr. Bishop was affected by the interview with the condemned man as he left the jail he said:

"Charlie seems to be gradually realizing the seriousness of his position. He is slowly losing that self-possession which has been so strongly marked. While with him I noticed that he talked rapidly and all his actions betrayed excitement. For the first time since I have visited him his eyes were dimmed with tears. He did not cry, but he showed emotion.

"Did Tucker confess or show any indications of confession?" was asked.

"He did not, nor did he give any intimation of such a thing. On the contrary, he still maintained his innocence. He told me he never knew Mabel Page, that he did not see her but once, or talking in front of the Page house on the occasion when he visited Harold Page for the purpose of trading dogs.

"He did admit to me, however, that he forged that check for $150." This is the check to which reference was made during the trial.

"Tucker explained to me," said Mr. Bishop, "that he never realized the enormity of this offence until after the commission of the act. He said he saw an easy chance to get money, a large amount, more than he ever had before, and he did not realize what he was doing.

"Charlie asked me to see Warden Bridges and ask him if I might act as his spiritual adviser during his confinement in Charlestown prison, and he has been notified that he was to be transferred to the State prison within a few days. I have consented to make the request.

Asked Only for Mercy.

"I saw Governor Guild Tuesday and went thoroughly over the case with him, and the Governor told me that he would do all in his power to see that justice was done. I did not go there to plead for Tucker's life, but asked only mercy.

"Judge Sheldon is a classmate of mine. Since the trial I have discussed the Tucker case with him. He is a dear friend and a near neighbor of mine. Judge Sheldon told me that during the entire trial he did all in his power to safeguard Tucker's interests, and he assured me he would do the same at the coming hearing.

"My interest in the Tucker case dates back to his boyhood, when he was a member of my Sunday school in the Methodist Episcopal church for several years. From that time until a year ago I had not seen him. His father asked me then if I would call at the jail and see him. Periodically I have visited him since then and have tried to aid him in a spiritual way.

"There are certain conditions which surrounded the boy during his early days which, in the event of his death, I think it my duty to make public, but at this time I cannot do so."

GOVERNOR WILL CAREFULLY WEIGH ALL THE FACTS

"You may be sure that I shall give the case (that of Charles L. Tucker) serious and conscientious consideration before rendering a decision."

This reply, dated May 29, was made by Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., to a letter written by William Peel, a business man of No. 104 Common street, Boston, in which he declared that Tucker was not proven guilty of the murder of Mabel Page.

In his letter to the Governor Mr. Peel said:

"Tucker was not found guilty by evidence; the jury arrived at their conclusions by personal feelings in the matter, their minds having been poisoned by false stories circulated that Tucker had drowned his sister, or allowed her to be drowned in four feet of water when he could have saved her from drowning.

"That story was circulated broadcast throughout the State, and must have come before the jury's notice before they were selected on the jury, and that story must have prejudiced the jury's opinions and caused them to find Tucker guilty, when evidence was very much lacking as a proof of his guilt.

"I consider the findings of the jury, upon the evidence produced at the trial, was about the most ridiculous in the history of crimes.

Not Proven by Evidence.

"You may believe Tucker was guilty of the murder, so did the jury believe it, and state that the witnesses for the defence were lying any more than he, I, or anyone else had or have to say that the government witnesses were lying, and did conspire to swear Tucker's life away. With such contradictory testimony as produced at that trial, surely somebody told lies. Who were the liars? Mere statements prove nothing, even when they come from a District Attorney or Attorney-General.

Perjury in Court.

"On April 27, John B. Moran, District Attorney, did say to me 'that there is scarcely ever a case in court where more or less perjury is not sworn to.'

"First Assistant District Attorney Dennison, on May 4, did state to me words which mean as follows: 'You can tell about all the lies you have a mind to outside the courts, and they have no bearing whatever upon the lies you tell under oath in court. That you can tell about all the lies you can think of while testifying, and that the Grand Jury will not indict you for testifying falsely under oath not even when it can be proved you have lied.'

"Now, Governor, those are nice statements—which they come through a District Attorney of Suffolk County in his first assistant.

"They place a stigma upon the courts of this State and upon the Grand Jury of Suffolk County. I wish to have these matters investigated, and until they are settled right that stigma will remain.

"You need no longer rely upon the courts and juries of this State, and Tucker should not die or go to jail when found guilty of perjury and personal feelings being admitted as evidence.

When seen by a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN at his place of business today Mr. Peel said:

Pleads for Justice.

"I do not know Charles Tucker. I do not want to know him. I have never seen him, but I do want to see justice done. That is why I have interested myself in the case.

"I followed the Tucker case from beginning to end, and I can conscientiously say that I see no reason why he should have been convicted. He has not been proven guilty, and, therefore, should not go to the chair."

MORAN KILLS AN ATTEMPT TO BURY HIM

District Attorney John B. Moran to-day declared that a State ticket, bearing the names of William L. Douglas for Governor, Henry M. Whitney for Lieutenant-Governor and his own name for Attorney-General is absolutely unauthorized.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN Reporter Mr. Moran said:

"I am not and will not be candidate for Attorney-General. I do not recognize the right of self-constituted leaders, actuated by personal and selfish motives, to dictate nominations.

"My appeal, when I conclude to announce my candidacy for office, will be made to the people.

"For boasism I have nothing but contempt; for bosses nothing but defiance."

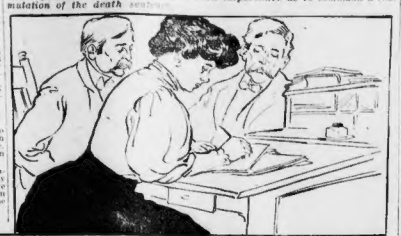
The ticket, rumor has it, was framed up by Josiah Quincy as a slate for the Democratic State convention. So far as Mr. Moran is concerned, he makes his position clear in his statement to-day, and there is little likelihood that he will be the candidate for the third place on the ticket.

Mr. Quincy's favoring of such a ticket, many of the old politicians think, may have some weight in bringing Mr. Douglas up again to head the State ticket, and to place Mr. Whitney's name second, but Mr. Moran has his own opinion on the subject.

WILL THIS EVIDENCE SAVE TUCKER?

SKETCHED BY BOSTON AMERICAN STAFF ARTIST.

Here are some of the points to be brought out by counsel for Tucker at the hearing before Governor Guild on Tuesday. There is additional evidence, the nature of which the condemned man's lawyers refuse to comment upon, save to say that it is of such importance as to command a commutation of the death sentence.



Alice W. Hubbard swears that Mrs. H. V. Freeman denies giving Mabel Page the death ring.

Rev. W. Copley Winslow swears that Mr. Page made death-bed revelations to him.

Thomas B. Flynn will give new testimony on blood spots which Tucker says he got at theatre.

2,000 WORKERS PROTEST LABOR BOARD MEMBER

Protesting against the reappointment of William Haviland to the chairmanship of the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation on the ground that it is now impossible to obtain unbiased judgment in disputes on wages and working conditions, a committee representing the different unions of Brockton shoe workers met Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., this afternoon at the State House.

Twenty-one or more delegates from the Shoe Workers' Union, the best organized and largest organization ever sent out by the shoe workers here, protests against the reappointment of Haviland by the name of the 12,000 union shoe workers of Brockton. They claim that with the State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation as organized at present it is impossible for organized labor to receive fair treatment.

The shoe workers of various cities of Massachusetts are under contract of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union do not strike, but send all disputes to the State Board. They claim that since Mr. Haviland has been a members of the board that it has been impossible to get treatment in keeping with the evidence presented in behalf of the working men.

The procession had just passed through Mayor street and was about to turn into the esplanade leading to the palace when the explosion shook the buildings in the vicinity, stunned a large number of people and threw the cortege into confusion.

The royal couple was brought to a sudden stop by the shock, officers and soldiers of the escort falling to the ground about the coupety and horses that had been killed. The screams of the people mingled with the groans of the dying. It was immediately seen that the royal coach was intact except as it had been damaged by flying splinters.

There was a wild cry of dismay and dread from the crowd as the bomb exploded. Number of the guests and near personages who were in the wedding procession, as well as many soldiers and citizens, made a rush toward the house from which the bomb had been thrown, in the hope of catching the assassin.

SELECT SITE FOR FRANKLIN FUND BUILDING

The new Franklin Union, endowed by Benjamin Franklin to the amount necessary to gain at centennial interest still it should become independent enough to be possible a building for the use of workingmen, will be located at the corner of Berkeley and Appleton streets. This was definitely settled to-day, when the trustees of the fund voted to purchase a site at that place and to pay $100,000 for the land.

Not long ago the trustees voted to offer $80,000 for the two lots, containing 16,000 square feet, but the Hayes estate, which owned the property, refused to dispose of it at that figure and held out for $100,000. The property is large for $78,000, and the present price is held to be not excessive.

This action is final, and definitely solves a problem that has been a long time before the trustees and all interested in the disposition of the Franklin fund.

FIVE STRONG FORCES FIGHT SUBWAY BILL

Determined Struggle Against Elevated Road's Designs on Cambridge.

NOW BEFORE LEGISLATURE

Strong assaults by five powerful influences will be made against the proposed Cambridge subway bill, which, in its present form, allows the Boston Elevated Railway to build a subway in Cambridge and an elevated structure in Boston as it pleases.

To-day the Cambridge subway bill was reported to the Legislature. Representative Lomasney served notice that, at the proper time, he will offer an amendment, and the Cambridge Public Franchise League gives warning that it will oppose the bill in its present form.

Representative Lomasney will move for a subway for Boston. The Cambridge Franchise League will fight for a referendum and against a perpetual lease to the Elevated Railroad of Cambridge streets.

The Charles River Dam Commission insists on a clause in the bill which will give it the right to determine how the railway shall be connected with the new dam. Representative Lomasney's amendment will contain such a provision. The Boston Transit Commission is opposed to an elevated structure at the Boston end, and declares that a subway connecting the dam from the Charles River to Haymarket Square or the new Washington street subway is entirely feasible.

Property owners in the North End will fight the bill. According to the argument of Representative Lomasney, it has not been fully gone over the ground. Fifty buildings along Lesterfield, Lynde, Hudson and Causeway streets, the route of the proposed elevated structure, will be either entirely demolished or very seriously damaged by the overhead structure in Boston. Many of the damaged properties are boarding houses, and most of the small buildings put out of existence will be the homes of the poor, the heavily mortgaged homes in which the owners, owning one, but two small equities.

The damages that the Elevated would have to pay for an elevated structure would be enormous, according to the figures of an expert furnished to Representative Lomasney. Estimating the damages awarded at 25 per cent of the real value of the property damaged along the route, including the Boston & Maine and the Lowell & Lowell stations, the total is found to be $1,457,880.

Adding to that sum $250,000, the cost of building half a mile of elevated road, and the cost of the entire construction is found to be $1,707,880. Lomasney does not agree that the same length of subway could be built for $1,250,000, showing that the actual cost of an elevated road in the North End would exceed the cost of a subway $457,880.

The plea of the Elevated that a subway would cost excessively fills out the figure of the real figures showing that it would be cheaper to construct a subway.

President Dunbar of the Cambridge Franchise League says of the purchase clause of the bill:

"If the railway, by means of a so-called purchase clause, has induced the citizens of Cambridge to consent to what is virtually a perpetual franchise, the people of Cambridge ought to be informed of it, and that no matter how late the hour. The bill amounts to the perpetual grant of right, for which in Boston the company pays a large annual rental.

"The alternative is, after giving the use of the location for twenty years, to pay in the shape of interest on bonds, which for the acquisition of the Main street subway alone, is estimated at $1,000,000.

"To this must be added corresponding bonuses for the other thoroughfares it will build. The city's option, if exercised, ensures a profit to the corporation, and, if not exercised, leaves it in the possession of the perpetual right that it desires."

FUND TO BUY STONE FOR GRAVE OF FANNY PARNELL STARTS WITH JUMP

WREATHS ON GRAVE OF FANNY PARNELL AT MT. AUBURN CEMETERY.

Hibernian Society Appoints a Committee to Look After Cemetery Lot.

Indications are that the fund which has been started by the BOSTON AMERICAN for the placing of a headstone over the hitherto unmarked grave of Miss Fanny Parnell, sister of Charles Stewart Parnell, the great Irish leader, will reach a substantial sum. Already the people have caught the spirit of the plan and are forwarding their contributions to Treasurer Joseph E. McCarthy.

It is not planned to place any great monument over the grave. But it has been seen, however, since the BOSTON AMERICAN called attention to the fact that the lot in Mt. Auburn Cemetery was unmarked, that there should be some fitting memorial to the woman who was beloved by her famous brother.

To take hold of the work in a fitting manner, the Ancient Order of Hibernians has appointed this committee to make all arrangements are made to care for the grave and receive funds: State president, Matthew Cummings; Captain John H. Dillon, county president of Suffolk, and John F. Donnelly, county president of Middlesex.

In placing the matter before a meeting of the A. O. H. Sunday afternoon, State President Cummings said:

"The grave of Fanny Parnell, sister of the great Irish leader, is uncared for and unmarked in Mt. Auburn. This fact was brought to my attention by the BOSTON AMERICAN, which kindly offered to accept subscriptions and open the columns for the subscription list, in order that we may be able to place a headstone to mark the grave.

"As the A. O. H. is the great Irish society, its duty is to co-operate with the AMERICAN and give to this movement its support and endorsement."

The support was pledged by a unanimous vote to this movement to have proper care taken of the grave. The state officers at their next meeting will be instructed to place a wreath on the grave every Memorial Day. All last Wednesday this office was perplexed by Mr. Cummings.

It is expected that the cost of such a monument as is believed most fitting to mark the grave will be but a few hundred dollars.

Treasurer McCarthy will receive contributions sent to him in care of the BOSTON AMERICAN. They may also be sent to any member of the committee which has been appointed by the A. O. H.

The following amounts have been received by Mr. McCarthy from officials of the Ancient Order of Hibernians:

Matthew Cummings, State president.$5.00
Edward T. H. McLaughlin, State chaplain 5.00
Brance O'Donnell, vice president.... 5.00
John P. Mahoney, secretary..... 5.00

ALL COFFEE FOR UBERO CO. WAS BOUGHT

This Was Done, Though It Advertised Raising "the Finest in the World."

LIQUOR SOLD TO NATIVES

That the Consolidated Ubero Plantation Company, described in its literature as raising the "finest coffee in the world," bought all the coffee drunk by the plantation employes was the testimony of John F. Luther of Worcester, a former employe on the plantation, to-day at the trial of Fernando L. Ubero, charged with the larceny of $1,250,000 from Ubero investors.

Mr. Luther said the principal business of the store on the plantation which the literature described as doing a large business with traders in the vicinity was the selling of liquor to the natives. Mr. Luther was the storekeeper part of the time he was employed on the plantation, and he raised a laugh, during his cross-examination, when asked by Attorney Baker if he sold any "mocha."

"I don't know what it is," replied the witness.

"Well, what do the natives drink?" asked Baker, replied Mr. Luther, and everybody laughed.

"Banking" with Two Checks.

The "large banking business" done on the plantation, Mr. Luther said, consisted in cashing two checks during the ten months he was there. The employes of the Boston Ubero, the Indianapolis Ubero and the Consolidated Ubero company's were paid every two weeks, but on the same bank account. The money to pay the expenses, he said, came from No. 80 State street, Boston, the office of the Boston Ubero and Consolidated Ubero companies.

Besides the liquor nothing but plantation supplies and the mail, witness said. About 10,000 of these were disposed of at 25 cents each, plantation prices. The coffee drying factory, he said, was used as a storehouse and afterward converted into a bunkhouse for the natives.

John F. Browning, an investor in the company, who went to the plantation in February, 1905, in company with William L. Walleigh, to examine the property, stated there were no such groves of rubber trees growing on the plantation as were represented in the pictures; that the few oranges on the plantation were punky and of a size that there was no other citrous fruit growing and only a few pineapples and some small dry limes.

Coffee Was Very Bad.

He said he drank some coffee while there.

"I don't know where it came from, but it was very bad," said Mr. Browning.

"Was the fault in the way it was canned," witness stated.

Cross-examined, witness admitted that he didn't know whether February was the season when the coffee crops should be growing. He admitted that there might have been 500,000 rubber trees and 150,000 coffee trees on the plantation.

Mrs. John F. Luther testified briefly that she went to the plantation as a housekeeper in 1905 and stayed about six months. Mrs. Luther said the picture of the plantation exhibited in court bore some resemblance to the original.

With a sheet wrapped tightly about his head and the end of a rubber tubing attached to an open gas jet in his mouth, Smith M. CONGRESSMAN ADAMS DEAD BY HIS OWN HAND

AUTHOR OF WHIPPING POST BILL SHOOTS HIMSELF IN MOUTH; BULLET IN BRAIN.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Charged at his failure to impress his colleagues seriously, fearing defeat through the rout of the Philadelphia machine and a heavy crash in the stock market, Congressman Robert Adams shot himself with suicidal intent early to-day and died three hours later at the Emergency Hospital.

He died at the shooting about 5:20 o'clock at his apartments, No. 1705 H street northwest. The weapon was discharged into his mouth and the bullet passed into his brain.

Adams is the Republican representative of the Second Pennsylvania district (Philadelphia) and was author of the famous whipping post bill.

Adams was found by his butler this morning sitting in a chair at the foot of his bed, with his head leaning on a table.

A pistol was lying on a trunk a few feet away. Blood was on the bed cloth ing, indicating that he had shot himself while in bed.

He was attired in his night linen and was conscious when found. Dr. Carmichael of No. 808 Seventeenth street, was passing by the apartments and was summoned. He found Mr. Adams still sitting at the table and holding his head in his hands.

He rushed to the side of the congressman, and found that he had inflicted a revolver shot wound in his mouth. When asked whether he was suffering any pain, Mr. Adams said, "No."

Secretary Is Mystified.

Mr. Adams left the following note addressed to James Black, the colored caterer in charge of the club quarters where he lived:

"Notify H. G. Clements, 1326 L street, telephone Maine 1803. Also Francis P. Adams, 1817 Wallace street. Left money in my pocket-book. Dr. Carmichael will notify Affairs," he reported, conducted through the House and in conference with the Senate had charge of the Cuban resolutions and the Platt amendment, reported and had passed through the House the same hour the declaration of war against Spain.

Adams was born in Philadelphia, was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1869 and practiced law for five years. He was made United States Minister to Brazil in 1880, but resigned in 1890. In the Fifty-fifth Congress, as chairman of the Committee on Foreign Representative Morrell of Pennsylvania was speaking in the House on the announcement of Adams's death.

"It is with the deepest feelings of pain and sorrow that I have to announce to the House the sudden death this morning of an old friend," he said.

General Morrell moved resolutions of sorrow, authorizing the sergeant-at-arms to take charge of the funeral, but omitting in accordance with Adams's last request, provisions for a committee and memorial services. The resolutions having been adopted, the House, as a further mark of respect, adjourned until to-morrow.

Drafted Spanish War Act.

TEXTILE MEN ASK RAISE

FALL RIVER, June 1.—At a conference this afternoon between the executive committee of the Manufacturers' Association and representatives from the five textile unions that make up the Textile Council, the labor people will ask for an increase in the wage rate, on the ground that the sliding scale that had been substituted a year ago eight months ago, was not doing justice to the employes. The sliding scale netted the help a bonus of 3.6 per cent each week, or a total average raise of 7.8 per cent. The manufacturers hold that they cannot afford to raise wages.

CRAZED WITH BURNING ECZEMA

Suffered From Childhood With Severe Itching and Burning—Eczema Spread Over Hands and Fingers—Received No Benefit From Physicians.

BLESSINGS FOR THE CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I was troubled with eczema in some way or other from childhood. About three years ago the trouble was confined to my right hand. I consulted two physicians, but received no benefit from them. In the winter of 1904 the trouble had become so bad as to extend over the back of my hand, and up on the fingers, and in a short time to the palm. The itching and burning at times was so severe as to almost craze me. I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent. I used two cakes of Soap, one box of the Ointment, and two bottles of the Resolvent. I cannot begin to tell of the benefit I received. My appetite and weight increased, and I felt and looked like a new person. You have my full permission to publish as much of this as you see fit. Blessing the Cuticura Remedies, yours truly, Miss Flora E. Wiley, Milo, Me., Oct. 9, 1905."

Latter Takes Oaths of Office and Organize at Brief Session.

The executive council to-day unanimously confirmed Governor Guild's appointments of Stephen O'Meara, Police Commissioner, and Ezra H. Baker, chairman, and Fred A. Emery and Samuel A. Haddon, members of the new Excise Board.

The members of the Excise Board at once took their oaths of office. Following this ceremony, accompanied by Governor Guild's secretary, Charles F. Gettemy, they visited police headquarters, where they were presented to the present Police Commissioners.

Later the board held its first meeting, at which formal organization was effected. The session was brief, at the conclusion of which Chairman Baker said:

"The board will have no statement to make of its future plans until we have conferred with Mr. O'Meara. We will leave the selection of our quarters and similar details until we have had an opportunity of discussing the subject with him."

The board will have little to occupy its attention for another year, as its predecessors have just completed the granting of the new liquor licenses, which will not expire until next June.

Mr. O'Meara will arrive on the Arabic Saturday and will begin his duties as head of the Boston police department Monday morning.

GIRL SLAYER'S LAWYER MOVES JURY TO TEARS

Counsel Says Josephine Terranova, if Acquitted, Will Enter Convent.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Eight of the twelve Terranova jurors were weeping when ex-Judge Palmieri finished his summing up in the girl's behalf to-day. The lawyer himself was in tears. Josephine Scott hid his eyes with his hands and the sound of sobs could be heard all over the court room.

The girl was dry-eyed.

"This girl can never go back to her husband," said Judge Palmieri, in conclusion. "The awful spectre of her past would haunt her. Two sisters of charity are waiting outside for your verdict, and if it sets her free they will take her to their house of God. There she will pray for you and for me, and you can say with clear consciences, 'God bless you, little girl, God bless you.'"

A stenographer was called to-day to identify a transcript of testimony taken at the coroner's inquest. The prosecution rested its case, and counsel for the defence rested also, after calling Dr. Kingsley E. Page.

Ex-Judge Palmieri, counsel for the girl, made the usual motion to dismiss the case on the ground of insufficient evidence. Judge Scott denied the motion. Mr. Palmieri shortly after 11 o'clock began to sum up. He told the jury that he felt they would do their full duty and would be rehearsed the facts in the case carefully and at length, and marshalled them so as to show beyond question that the girl was insane when she killed her aunt and uncle.

BRICKLAYERS WIN SUCCESS

With about twenty-seven members out of 2,000 idle to-day as the result of its demand for increased wages and better hours, the Bricklayers' Union of Boston is claiming a great victory. Nearly all of the employers have granted the terms of the men, thus preventing the general strike which had been ordered to begin to-day.

Sixty cents an hour and a half holiday Saturdays during the Summer months were the demands of the men, and last Thursday evening at a general meeting it was decided to strike June 1 if these terms were not complied with by the employers. The men had been getting fifty-five cents an hour for their work and their hours on Saturday were not short.

HER CHOICE OF PRISON HEEDED

Crying, "I don't want to go to Sherborn; send me to the island," Clara Robinson, a good-looking, well-dressed woman of thirty-five years, was sentenced to six months in the latter prison by Judge Ely in the Municipal Criminal Court to-day after she had confessed to shoplifting.

Yesterday she stole an 88 shirtwaist in a downtown store, and was arrested by Inspector Knox of headquarters. Knox told Judge Ely that the woman had served two terms of six months each, and had been fined twice previously on charges of picking pockets and shoplifting.

ATTEMPTS TO WRECK CARS

WORCESTER, June 1.—Three attempts are made to wreck Hudson and Clinton electric cars just out of the village of Berlin between midnight and 1:30 this morning, and Worcester police are to-day investigating the case. Large bowlders had been placed between the rails at the points of sharp curves and had the cars crashed into them, wreck would have been inevitable. The searchlight, however, revealed the danger in time.

PROBE DEATH OF WOMAN KILLED BY STARVATION

AGED MRS. LOVAN SNOW IS SAID TO HAVE FASTED 34 DAYS AT HUSBAND'S COMMAND.

WORCESTER, June 1.—Dying after a fast of thirty-four days in an attempt to improve her health, the death of Mrs. Lovan M. Snow, the wife of one of the wealthiest citizens of Sutton, is being investigated.

Mrs. Snow died on Sunday morning. She was seventy-eight years of age. Her husband, who, it is said, was chiefly responsible for her long and fatal fast, is eighty-two years of age.

Dr. Charles S. Smith, who was called in to see the result of the experiment on the aged woman, gave a death certificate. The authorities were told about the matter and the facts did not leak out until today.

Meeting Dr. Smith one day before his wife's death, Mr. Snow said:

Experiment by Husband.

"If you haven't got anything to do this afternoon come around to the house. I am trying an experiment. Now understand this must not be a professional visit, merely want to show you something that will interest you."

"All right, I will come over," said Dr. Smith.

That afternoon the physician says he and his wife called at the Snow residence and the story of the doctor and his wife on what they saw there is identical.

Mrs. Snow was sitting up to the sink in her wheeled chair washing dishes. Her figure was so shrunken that her clothes hung loosely. Ordinarily, according to those who knew her, she weighed close to 200 pounds, but the physician and his wife say they hardly recognized the frail mite of humanity that stood so patiently and quietly in the invalid's chair.

Her face was of a deadly pallor; her hands were mere bundles of bones with dry parchments of skin stretched over them, and she talked almost in a whisper, as if physically exhausted.

Without Food 27 Days.

Dr. Smith and his wife say that they looked at the woman in horror.

Mr. Snow stood back of the invalid's chair, and his face was wreathed in peculiar smiles.

"What is the matter? What have you been doing?" asked the doctor.

"I have been fasting," she said. "I haven't eaten any food for twenty-seven days."

"For God's sake, woman," said Dr. Smith, "this thing will kill you."

"I can't help it," said Mrs. Snow, her voice making so low that it could hardly be heard. "Mr. Snow has been experimenting on me; he got me into it, and I shan't eat until he tells me to."

Dr. Smith says the woman then became extremely irritable, but her husband still smiled, apparently with satisfaction.

Dr. Smith felt of her pulse and found it in the neighborhood of seventy-five. The physician says that he was surprised to see that she had such a strong heart, and he believes that this fact was the only thing that kept her alive.

"No, I shan't eat till Mr. Snow tells me to," said Mrs. Snow, and she looked again at her husband, who still wore his smile.

Warned by Physician.

The physician says that Mr. Snow followed him to the door, and as he was going out with his wife, said:

"Doctor, when you come around in five or six days, you will find that there has been more fasting."

Two days afterward, to satisfy his curiosity, Dr. Smith says, he drove up to the Snow farmhouse and saw Mr. Snow in the front yard. The old man seemed cheerful and greeted the physician with a smile.

"How your wife begun eating yet?" asked the physician.

"No," said the old man, smiling and rubbing his hands, "she is as chipper as a bird and she hasn't eaten a thing. She is still doing all my work, my washing, cooking and ironing."

"Mr. Snow," said Dr. Smith, "I'm afraid you'll kill her. You have carried this too far."

"Well," said Mr. Snow, seemingly not a whit scared by the physician's prediction, "the other cases in the book didn't die. They came out all right, and one man fasted forty-two days and was benefited. I believe that my wife will come out all right."

"Did your wife fast?" Mr. Snow was asked to-day by a reporter.

"Yes, she did. I don't deny it, but I did not make her do it. For years she had never eaten a breakfast. Some time ago I received a circular from Charles C. Haskell, Norwich, Ct., who has written a book on fasting. His wife, who was afflicted with the asthma, was cured by fasting.

"I was impressed with what the circular had to say, and I sent for the book. It came and I read it a good deal. My wife also read it.

"I stopped eating for two days myself, and it did me lots of good. It helped my rheumatism and my stomach was much improved."

FAVORITISM CHARGED TO POLICE BOARD

W. T. A. Fitzgerald Accuses Chairman Cole of Shielding Lieutenant Libby.

HEARD ONE SIDE, HE SAYS

Aroused because of the dismissal of charges made against Lieutenant William Libby of the Dudley street Police Station, ex-Senator William T. A. Fitzgerald today accused Chairman Charles H. Cole of the Police Commissioners of squelching the case without a hearing.

"You are friendly to the man," declared Senator Fitzgerald angrily, as Mr. Cole attempted to explain the attitude of the board. "That was all there was to it. You heard his story and then did not think it necessary to consider the other side. I demand that the case be reopened."

"Why didn't you wait until the new Commissioner takes office to file these charges then?" returned Mr. Cole.

"I heartily wish that I had done so," was the reply. "Then I would have obtained justice."

Senator Fitzgerald is acting as attorney for Father Maurice H. O'Connor of the St. James Church of Harrison avenue, who charges that Lieutenant Libby refused to energize his fire badge on the occasion of the Leatherbee lumber yard blaze on Albany street, the evening of May 1.

Father O'Connor preferred charges of conduct unbecoming an officer against Lieutenant Libby. Chairman Cole says that there was nothing upon which to base a case.

WIFE OF LYNN BARD STUDIES BOOKKEEPING

Mrs. John W. Hutchinson Goes to School to Learn to Be Business Woman.

TO GUARD HIS ESTATE

LYNN, June 1.—Sitting at a desk, rubbing elbows with slips of girls of fifteen and sixteen years, Mrs. John Wallace Hutchinson, wife of the famous abolition orator and singer, of High Rock, is mastering the intricacies of bookkeeping and typewriting—for pleasure and to assist her husband, she says. Her husband says she is working to be able to care for his affairs during a suit to be entered to remove the trustee appointed by the courts of Essex County over his estate.

It is said that the woman who became the wife of the famous man at Portsmouth during the peace conference last Summer declares that her husband needs no trustee to manage his affairs while she is living and able to manage things herself, so to that end she is learning practical business in a business college in this city.

"I never had a chance to learn those things before," she said to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day. "I am going to learn something about business, for it will be a good thing now that I have the time. I am going to master bookkeeping and typewriting, so that I can help my husband manage his estate. I like the work, and am just as enthusiastic as any girl."

Mrs. Hutchinson, whose marriage to the bard of Lynn, caused his daughter, Mrs. Campbell, to attempt to have the marriage annulled, is about forty-five years old.

ARREST SEQUEL TO BANK CRASH

An aftermath of the financial troubles which closed up the Hanover Bank of this city last Winter comes up in the New York city courts to-day in the arraignment of Henry R. Wade, president and treasurer of the Empire Bond and Securities Company, on a charge of larceny of several thousand dollars from Charles J. Bagley of New York.

The New York dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day say that Wade was arrested last night on Bagley's complaint. Bagley owns timber lands in Canada which he wished to develop. He declares that Wade offered to finance a company to develop the timber property if Bagley would get the bonds guaranteed by the Imperial Trust Company of New Jersey. Bagley says he advanced money for the bond guarantee, and that a few days later the bond-office department closed up the Imperial Trust Company, also the Hanover Bank of Boston, with which it was financially allied. Bagley got back part of his money, but had Wade arrested when he failed to return the balance.

Men's $3.00 and $3.50 Shoes at $1.95

How We Got These Shoes at a Greatly Reduced Price

We signed contracts with three of the best and largest makers of men's shoes in the East, agreeing to buy for cash all shoes left on their hands by reason of countermanded orders, surplus production, shoes delayed in making and factory checked shoes. EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

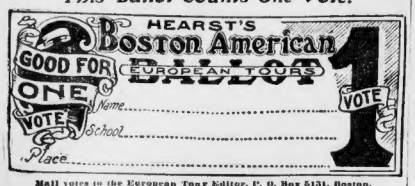
WHO IS THE MOST DESERVING TEACHER?

This Ballot Counts One Vote.



Mail votes to the European Tour Editor, P. O. Box 5131, Boston.

Who is the most deserving teacher-candidate in the European Tour Election? And why?

Write the European Tour Editor the merits of your candidate! Why should she receive one of the Old World tours and a share of the cash prizes of $1,500 to be awarded in twenty-four days? Let the friends of the teachers speak for them!

The best of these letters will be published in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Thousands of readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN stand ready to support with their votes and subscriptions some teacher in the European Tour Election now drawing to a close. They would cast their coupons and pay for their paper in advance to help a worthy teacher, if they knew of her. Now let each candidate's friends tell the public of New England why she should enjoy the great foreign tour.

Nearly 1,000 women school teachers have been voted for. What one of these is most deserving of honor and reward? This is a test of popularity aside from the balloting.

There are now but TWENTY-FOUR DAYS MORE of voting.

The voting was moderate all along the line yesterday. Shifts in relative standing of the teachers were confined to the Greater Boston Division.

Miss W. May Nash of Cambridge advanced one point, going above Miss Minnie E. Bourgeois of Quincy.

Miss Katie Boyd jumped upward two numbers over Misses Helen Galvin and Sophie G. Thayer, and the little Wedding-ton School teacher now leads those just outside of the tour list. Miss Gertrude W. Simpson of Dorchester, further down, advanced two points.

In the race for the highest individual total, which will yield $500 in cash in addition to the "Grand Tour," Mrs. Nellie B. Hibbinson of Worcester increased her lead over Miss Grace J. Allan of Bristol.

CANDIDATES AND THEIR STANDING

Following is the list of teachers having 10,000 or more votes in the European Tour Election. Record is kept of the names and votes of all teachers still unpublished.

The list is arranged to show which teachers would be winners of the forty tours if the contest were ended to-day.

The winners of the $1,000 will be the six teachers having the highest totals at the end, regardless of the division in which they are located.

The winners of the $500 in cash "consolation awards" will be the ten teachers polling the highest total of votes and failing to win tours.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO READ

"The specific characteristic of beer is not its alcoholic property. Modern technics in beer brewing have a tendency to reduce the amount of alcohol in beer and to correspondingly increase the proportions of extracts and carbonic acid. Owing to the small amount of alcohol in beer, the same can not properly be called an alcoholic beverage in the usual sense of the word."

The Happy Man

By C. B. M.

WHEN summer sun with torrid heat
Beats down upon the city street,
When collars wilt and all men sweat
Until their very shirts are wet,
When every throat is chocked with dust,
And every man feels that he must
Take something for that awful thirst
With which he seems to be accursed,
Happy the man who slowly quaffs
A cooling glass of foaming "Pfaff's."

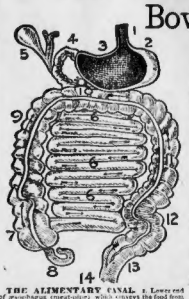
Your Thirty Feet of Bowels



THE ALIMENTARY CANAL: 1, Lower end of esophagus (meat-pipe) which conveys the food from the throat to the stomach; 2, Stomach; 3, Pancreas; 4, Duodenum; 5, Small intestines; 6, Caecum; 7, Vermiform appendix; 8, Ascending colon; 9, Transverse colon; 10, Descending colon; 11, Sigmoid flexure; 12, Rectum; 13, Anus. The duodenum is continuous with the small intestines. The small intestine empties into the large intestine or colon at the caecum. The arrows indicate the direction which the contents of the bowels must take in passing through the alimentary canal.

YOU have thirty feet of intestines! What makes food travel through them?

A set of Muscles that line the walls of these Intestines or Bowels.

When a piece of Food rubs the walls of the Intestines these Muscles tighten behind it, and thus it starts a Muscle-wave which drives it through the whole length of the Bowels.

It should take about 12 hours to do this properly, so that nutritious parts of the food may have time to be digested and absorbed.

But,—if it takes twice or three times that period the food spoils in passing, and becomes as poisonous as if it had decayed before being eaten.

Now, the cause of delay (Constipation) is simply Weakness, or laziness of the Bowel-Muscles.

Want of Exercise, Indoor Employment, weakens these Bowel-Muscles, just as it weakens Arm and Leg Muscles.

Castor Oil, or Glycerine, will grease the passages for one load of Food at a time, but these lubricants can't help the Cause of Delay.

* * *

"Physic" like Salts, Calomel, Jalap, Phosphate of Soda, Mineral Waters, simply flush-out the Bowels for the one occasion only.

They do not remove the Cause of Constipation.

Moreover, they waste so much of the precious Digestive Fluids, in the flushing process, that takes a bigger dose every succeeding time to move the Bowel load.

But this is different with Cascarets.

Cascarets act on the Muscles of the Bowels and Intestines. They act just as Cold Water, or Exercise act on a Lazy man.

They act like exercise.

A Cascaret produces the same sort of Natural result that a Six Mile walk in the country would produce.

OIL KING GIVES AN INTERVIEW; DEFENDS TRUST

Rockefeller Declares Standard Oil Has Used Only Legitimate Business Methods.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, June 1.—"If the Standard Oil Company has been guilty of violating any law it should be punished.

"A thorough examination would reveal that it has followed a perfectly legitimate course of business in all its dealings."

Thus did John D. Rockefeller unburden himself yesterday while waiting for his steamship to sail in answer to the question:

"What do you think of the charge that the Standard Oil Company has been guilty of violating the Elkins anti-rebate law?"

"I have not thought anything of it," he went on. "If there is any charge under the sun that the Standard Oil Company has not been guilty of, from a newspaper point of view, I would like to know of it.

"You see, many newspapers like to abuse something, and the Standard Oil Company, being a concern that can stand abuse, gets it. It can take care of itself, I think."

Mr. Rockefeller said he had read about the report on the Beef Trust and he wondered how such things could be.

"If the condition of affairs is true, as reported," he said, "there should be steps taken to prevent the continuance of it.

"Unfortunately, there is usually a tendency to exaggerate in such matters. The President generally knows what he is about and I think he is taking the proper steps in this matter."

Then he changed the subject.

NEWS OF LABOR.

Cause for congratulation was given the members of Machinists' Lodge No. 264 last night when it was reported that two more firms had agreed to run their shops on a fifty-hour basis. They are the Taunton River Boat and Steel Company of Wollaston and the George T. McLaughlin Company, Dutton street, Boston. The former firm employs 500 men.

Within the past three weeks about twelve shops have agreed to a fifty-hour period from 1,000 where the machinists are on strike for an eight-hour day.

The regular monthly smoker, talk and initiation of Boston Lodge No. 264 was held last night at No. 85 Washington street. Twelve new candidates were admitted. An entertainment was given by Christian E. Plott, madelin, and John Jordan, Ronald MacDonald and Fred Walters, vocalists.

RELIEF FOR ENGINEERS.

A substantial sum for the relief of the San Francisco Engineers was noted as a result of the entertainment and smoker held given by Hoisting and Portable Engineers' Union No. 4 last night in Engineers' Hall, No. 994 Washington street.

President A. M. Haddell stated that he had received reports from the San Francisco union stating that the local members are not only homeless, but destitute, that they have not even got working clothes. Working apparel is to be sent on by the members of the local union.

J. J. Foley was master of ceremonies, Bernie D. Driscoll, secretary-treasurer of the State Branch of the A. F. of L., gave an interesting account of his travels through England, Ireland and Scotland two years ago, when he was a delegate to the British Trades Congress. Michael Dillon spoke on "The Value of Organization."

CIGARMAKERS ARE PLEASED.

Cigarmakers crowded Faneuil Hall last night to place their official seal upon the settlement of the strike which came to an end last Saturday after three weeks' duration, the employers granting the increase demanded. The strike committee submitted its final report, which was accepted with enthusiasm. All but sixty of the 1,300 men who were out on strike will go back to work by to-day, and they will return when stock is in readiness.

HAT COMPANY UNIONIZED.

Charles Morris, general organizer of the United Hatters of America, returned to Boston from Wabash, Ind., yesterday. He reported that the Pioneer Hat Company of that city had decided to return to union shop conditions. Mr. Morris leaves for New York Monday at the behest of the general office.

LABOR NOTES.

General Organizer William F. McCarthy of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers addressed an open meeting of painters of Newton, West Newton, Newton Centre, Newtonville and Watertown in Carpenters' Hall, Nonantum Block, Newton Centre, last night.

"OLD FORTUNATUS" AT TUFTS COLLEGE

For the first time in America Dekker's comedy of "Old Fortunatus" is to be given on the lawn at Tufts College this evening by the English department of the college, under the direction of Professor Thomas Whittemore, who superintended the production of Milton's "Comus" in 1901. Members of the choir and glee clubs and an orchestra will furnish the music, and the costumes are mainly from portraits in the National Gallery. The audience will include Queen Elizabeth and her court, and the dances will be of especial interest, including the "Pavane," the "Double Brande" and the "Nymph Dance." The performance will be repeated on Saturday afternoon and Monday evening.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS.

Boston, June 1—Two games for one admission bill the fans in the right spot and they wandered to the scene of double acts in big bunches.

It was like a continuous performance with a whole afternoon of sport and no intermissions. Owing to the long siege of playing the commission department did a rushing business and the bottles popped merrily in every corner of the grounds.

The turn down the Broadway gave the Pilgrims in the first game assured the fans that there would be no drizzly sessions when the teams lined up for two consecutive duels, and the local athletes were anxious to keep up their record of copping double headers.

Their intention to maintain their reputation in this direction met with the hearty co-operation of the fans, who gave all the encouragement they could.

It was one of the rare occasions when two games fell on ladies' day, and the fair sex must have been tipped off about the occasion, for they were out in generous numbers.

The announcement that Captain Jim would present one of his cafe pitchers, Glaze, who has not had a chance to show his real worth, was an extra inducement to the fans to go out and size up the skilful college twirler.

It did not take any expert information to insure a livelier exhibition on the part of the home favorites after the listless gambol that took place in the opening of the series.

Captain Jake Stahl got back with his block, and being a great card in the Hub, as the fans know him so well, he made the games more attractive.

IKE BRADLEY

WALTHOUR WILL HAVE TO RIDE HARD TO WIN

The card for the Revere Beach bicycle track for to-morrow night is one of the strongest the fans have been handed for a long time. The programme includes two star professional pacemakers and two amateur sprint events, a five-mile open for the amateurs and half-mile open for the novice class.

John Coffey of South Boston, who defeated "Pat" Logan and Dennie Connolly at the track May 26 afternoon, will be pitted against one of his old rivals, Young Al McCullins, "The pride of Lynn," for ten miles. The main event will be twenty-five miles between Walthour, Tommy Hall of England and Will Sisson of Cambridge, and as this will be a handicap event—the first one of its kind ever run in this section—the betting will be lively. It bound to be witnessed. Walthour will start on scratch, with Hall on the half-mile handicap. Sisson will have three-quarters. Walthour will have to ride harder than he ever did before to win.

MAHONEY IS HITTING SOME.

Dan Mahoney, of South Boston, who is covering first now for the Boston Blues, is playing as fast a game at first base as any initial sacker in New England. His stops and throws are a feature of every battle of the batts the Blues have.

STRICKLETT MAY FACE BOSTON NATIONALS

Special to the Boston American.

BROOKLYN, June 1.—Fred Tenney's Boston Nationals are certainly trying for the defeat record of the season, at present held by their confreres, the Boston American leans. Thirteen games in a row have gone against the Boston team and should they lose to-day and to-morrow against the weak-kneed Brooklyns, their chances of beating the record are good, as after that they meet the Pirates and all the rest of the hard-hitting Western teams.

The Tennites are certainly playing a punky game of ball these days. They are not hitting the ball harder than an aggregation of school players. Their fielding is very much to the blink at times, while their pitching department is not quite up to the standard. In other words they are up against it.

Wilhelm may do the twirling for the Bostons to-day, while Strickett may pitch for the home club.

Yesterday's game went to the credit of the Superbas, 7 to 0.

Each team got three hits. Eason did the pitching for the winners and Gus Dorner for the losers.

The sole score was made in the sixth. With Eason disposed of on strikes, Casey rammed a two-bagger to centre. Bridewell had a chance to throw him out at third on Batch's grounder or to retire Batch at first. He threw to third, drowning both and Casey tallied. A moment later Strobel threw Lumley out, as Bridwell's autopsy was very bad for the Boston outfielder.

HILLIARD DROVE CAR UNDER BIG HANDICAP AT READVILLE MEET

BY J. C. KERRISON.

But few of the thousands who witnessed the match race between Charles Basle and William Hilliard at Readville on Saturday afternoon knew the handicap under which Hilliard was driving. He was forced by a series of circumstances to go against Basle, who is recognized as one of the best men in the game to-day. He drove well and strong until the third mile, when he suddenly eased his car. Basle and Napier did not seem to conduct himself in the manner in which she had previously shown. This was, however, no fault with either the engine or the mechanism of the car. The trouble lay with the loosening of the spokes in the rear right front wheel, they threatening to collapse at every moment. Hilliard realized that there was something wrong with his car owing to the manner in which she answered her helm. Thereafter he drove with caution. When he came off the track several persons had their attention called to the condition of the front wheel. It is really remarkable that the wheel did not collapse at a time when Hilliard was making a turn around the track. This was due to the weakness developed in the car and comes as a result of the hard work she was forced to undergo at Cresent. At Lonely City and other races on the circuit, but forgetting the Worcester hill climb.

* * *

Joe Downey, the man who had such a narrow escape from serious accident at Readville on Wednesday, is up and about again. Yesterday he took a good long rest, and leaving a general amusness and the sprained of his right wrist he was in good condition. This morning he got around to his headquarters in Park Square and commenced to overhaul the wrecked Mercedes. The car is pretty badly twisted and twisted, but so far as her engine is concerned is believed to be in as good condition as previous to the fall. Of course the axles are sprained and twisted, but the chassis is in good order. How they say that the car is not so badly injured as it first imagined. R. H. Harding, the owner of the car, says he does not care how badly damaged the car may be so long as Downey or any one else was not injured. His only regret is that after having been invited to participate he was ruled out of the ten-mile handicap on the ground that his car was not a stock machine.

* * *

The honor of driving the fastest five miles on the track at Readville fell to H. E. Rice, the clever operator of the thirty-five-horsepower Rambler. This pair seems to be difficult to beat. Ever since the opening of the season they have been winning their share of prizes and showing form particularly creditable. The car travelled five miles in 6m 32 4-5s., better by several seconds than shown by any stock car; this, too, despite the fact that there were higher horsepower cars on the track than the Rambler. This showing is, however, only in keeping with what the dark Rambler has done previously; in fact she has been most consistent in her performances all year. The car made the fastest time of the day in the little climb of Parker Hill March 30, when the road was covered with ice and snow, making the climb in 1m. 26 2-5s. Then at Worcester she captured the event open to steam and gasoline cars.

* * *

The Great machine, which won the third race at Readville, has been protested by the Crawford people on the ground that it was not eligible to compete in a class for cars selling for $2,000 or under.

* * *

Manager Charles E. Pay of the local branch of the Ford Motor Co. received three car loads of six-cylinder Fords yesterday. He is now busily engaged in making some long distance deliveries. These cars have proven decidedly capable and popular since the show season.

MIAH MURRAY NOW AT HEAD OF LINCOLN A. C.

Boston's sporting fraternity will be glad to learn that Miah J. Murray is now the managing director and manager of the Lincoln Club of Chelsea. He is the successor of Manager Director Meleretti, who had to give up his management of the club owing to the pressure of other business. Billy Pierce, who was formerly match maker, will be press representative and traveling agent.

Murray, who will be well remembered by the fans of the Hub, left for no other reason than for his admirable conducting of the old Criterion Club in the Bijou Theatre Building on Tremont street, which at the time was declared to be one of the best appointed clubs in the East. Friends to have all the star boxers of the country appear at Chelsea.

Miah will have the arena at the Pythian Rink thoroughly renovated. The seats will be rearranged and a better ring built, but not until after the Kid Goodman-Dick Hyland bout of next Thursday.

GRAHAM MAY NOT RETURN TO PILGRIMS

It looks as though Catcher Graham had quit the Boston Americans for good. He is now travelling to Frisco, where his wife is reported to be very ill. All the time that he has been in the East with the team Graham has been worrying about his folks, and this has in a great measure hurt his playing. When he left the Hub he expressed his doubts of ever returning. Manager Collins thinks that he has gone for good.

Manager Collins is sure that he will get Catcher Eddie Phelps, as he is still the property of the Reds, and the latter are willing to let him go for the Hub team.

It has been reported that Manager Collins has offered $5,000 for Right Fielder Frank Jude of the Toledo (American Association) Club, whom President Ed Grillo procured from Carlisle.

HELGAMITE TO MEET RIVALS ON SPEEDWAY

A half-dozen good races have been arranged by the speed committee of the Dorchester Driving Club for to-morrow afternoon over the Franklin Field Speedway. Fred Bellows will have a go with his pacing mare Helgamite against the trotter Blue Mack, owned by R. C. Richardson, and Manila Boy, from the stable of O. H. Casavant. This should be one of the most exciting of the whole season, as there will be plenty of sport, too, in the other classes.

The banner matinee of the year comes on June 9—Dorchester day. At least ten events have been booked, with plenty of horses entered in each. The prizes on this occasion will be silver cups and other prizes. Following is the list of entries for to-morrow's races:

Class A—Manila Boy, b. g., O. H. Casavant; Helgamite, b. m., F. H. Bellows; Blue Mack, b. m., R. C. Richardson.

Class B—Fred, b. g., M. A. Norris; Ormanee, ch. g., C. H. Moore.

Class C—Tiller Boy, ch. g., J. S. Rockett; Sunrise Wilkes, g. g., E. S. Harris; Sonny Jim, b. g., A. Chas. D.—George K., ch. g., Jacob Moser; Miss Manager, gr. m., F. W. Hamilton.

Class E—Belle Wilkes, b. m., J. W. Mahoney; Forrest Belle, b. m., C. L. Holden.

Class F—Helgamite, blk. m., J. M. E. Merrill; Tony Swift, b. g., C. Connors.

AUBURNDALE'S DOG SHOW ON TO-DAY

The third open air show of the Ladies' Kennel Association of Massachusetts began to-day at Woodland Park, Auburndale. It is to be a two-days show, and the proceeds are to go to the aid of the Floating Hospital.

The dogs were benched under a large tent when the show opened to-day, and there were other tents for the officials of the club, for the program seller, for the judging and for refreshments. In short, there were tents enough about to serve a one-ring circus outfit.

James Mortimer and E. M. Oldham of New York were on the program for most of the judging, and they began early in the day distributing ribbons. There were other judges, however, Mr. A. H. Higgins, the keen amateur sportsman, looking after the beagles; Mr. W. H. Smythe passing on the French bulls; Mr. Arthur Merritt judging the airedales; Mr. Walter H. Hanley the Bostons, and Mr. J. Loring Brooks the Irish terriers.

The exhibitors were mostly from Boston and vicinity, few New Yorkers entering for the show. All the best-known breeders and fanciers were on hand for the opening to-day, and they pronounced the arrangements perfect for a show of this kind.

Mrs. Seagrave, Miss Brooks, Mrs. Speed, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Thayer, and other officers of the club who have worked hard to make the affair a success, were present from the minute the show opened, and they were the recipients of many congratulations from the visitors.

The attendance in the morning was confined to the fancy, but in the afternoon there was a large gathering, the women in their Summer costumes lending a gay air to the scene. The club was favored with fine weather for the opening.

BLUE BIFFERS AT ROSLINDALE

Roslindale diamond rooters will be out in force to-morrow to see the Boston Blue hitters play at Roslindale. All pitchers look alike to the Blues. Thirty-one hits, including doubles, triples and homers, was their gait with the wilder in the last two games.

Roslindale will serve up speedy sellers for the Blues, with O'Connell crowding Harris' twirls for Roslindale. The battle is on at 3.30 p. m., and Manager Ferris expects to handle a big crowd.

BEALS WRIGHT WON'T PLAY IN ENGLAND

LONDON, June 1.—Manager Little of the American tennis team, which will contest for the Davis cup, told the correspondent of the Publishers' Press to-day that there is little chance that Beals C. Wright will be able to play.

The danger of blood poisoning to his hand, which he injured the day before the team sailed, is slight, but his recovery is slow. He will probably leave for home within a week or ten days to nurse the injured hand.

ST. MARKS, 11; GROTON, 3.

ENGLISH BANTAM WANTS MATCH AT 116 LBS.

BRADLEY AFTER WALSH

Few English fighters have made the impression coming to America as little Ike Bradley, the British bantam champion, who is now in the Hub, and who seeks a match with Jimmy Walsh for the interbantam championship.

Bradley is the bona fide English champion of his class, as he beat Digger Stanley and has met the whole of Morris, Up other English crack, whenever they have met, and is every inch a born scrapper.

He has been boring in and mixing it like battled in the ring 160 times and has a record that is wonderful for a youngster. He is a very humble—He member of the fighting fraternity and makes no secret that he came over to this country to lick all the bantams and incidentally carry home some of the gold which he means to get by some hard battling.

His manager, George Barry, has sought a match with Walsh since his arrival ten days ago, but there seems to be nothing doing up to date.

It would be a grand match, as those can testify who saw Digger Stanley give Walsh such an interesting bout, as Bradley beat the Digger, getting out of a nice scrap and allowing him to default in the weighing.

The only thing that Bradley demands is that Walsh weigh the bantam limit of 116 pounds and no more, and asks for a forfeit substantial enough to assure him that the weight will be lived up to.

Bradley is training at the St. Alphonsus A. C. of Roxbury and if he is not matched with Walsh will take on D'Coole in Philadelphia next week.

Better Marry, Says Beatrice Fairfax to the Young Men

She Accuses the Bachelor of Trying to Shift the Blame for Being Single On to the Girls

By Beatrice Fairfax

IT'S all the girl's fault.

The bachelor has not been slow to take advantage of his masculine privilege of laying all the blame on the woman

"Every man would marry," said a bachelor to me the other day, "if he could only find the right kind of a wife; but a man has to take such chances. Ten to one he finds out afterward that he has made a mistake."

Did you ever hear anything to equal the conceit of that?

Does the woman take no chances, I would like to know? In the average man the superior in any way of the average woman?

The average woman is content to marry an honorable, manly, everyday man.

Out of commonplace clay she constructs an idol and worships at its shrine, never acknowledging to herself that her idol's feet are made of clay.

But the average man wants an angel to begin with.

His wife must be beautiful, clever, sweet, a competent housekeeper, a paragon of virtue.

And even then, instead of worshipping her, he expects her to worship him.

He demands a great deal, and yet in return he has nothing so wonderful to offer.

To be sure, he does earn the money and supports the household; but does not the wife do her full share toward the fortune building of the family?

A man will expect more work from his wife than he would dare ask from a hired servant; he will speak to her in a tone that he would not dare use toward any other woman on earth. His mother or sister would not suffer it for an instant.

And yet the bachelors have the effrontery to assert that it is hard to find a good wife!

Pity, Sir Bachelors! You'll have to give a better reason for celibacy than that.

Woman in these advanced days is not as crazy to marry as man would fain believe.

She is taking her place among the world's workers, and is tasting for the first time since creation began the sweets of independence.

So perhaps a good many of the bachelors are bachelors because they can't find a girl to have them.

How about that, bachelors old and young? The gauntlet is down; pick it up and defend yourselves.

Anxious to Wed

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Your article advising young men to marry is good.

I am a single young man of twenty-four years, but it is not my fault that I am single, for I would be a married man this very day if I could find the girl.

There is the hitch: there are a number of desirable and eligible young men whose only reason why they are not married out in hundred per cent. higher than they are now is that they cannot find the right girl. Particularly because their acquaintance is limited or within too narrow a range to allow a sensible selection.

I am refined, well educated and hold a responsible position at $20 per week, and do not consider myself bad looking.

I seek few girls, probably a dozen or so, and there is not one of them I am once course a big bit me. I have admitted several, but it was all one-sided.

I do not want an angel, only one who would care for me nearly as much as I would care for her.

Here we are in a large city with nice girls all around us, the majority of whom would be only too willing to make some young man happy, yet few of us mere men have the privilege of knowing more than three or four eligible young ladies.

To my mind, it is not so much a lack of interest in matrimony as how handicaps our young men, but rather a lack of communication with the available material.

Now, this is a condition which is deplorable to say the least, and doubtless you will agree with me.

One natural result of the narrowness of one's circle of lady friends is the temptation to flirt and make chance acquaintances who might catch the eye in various mean outdoor ways in this manner flirting becomes an enjoyable pastime, and flirtation like the proverbial green bay tree.

And this is an uncertain and dangerous method of enlarging one's acquaintance.

D. R. C.

"Just One Girl"

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

You had an article impeaching bachelors. Your logic was good, the inference excellent, but nevertheless it is my desire to dispute the matter as you put it.

You apparently place all the blame of bachelorhood on the man himself and brave him with a heavier burden than before. How about the man who cannot help himself?

For instance: A man, not attractive to women, and capable of but one sincere love, puts all his energy into the effort to win a certain girl. He thinks his chances of success good, as he has not been discouraged by the girl, but when he puts the question he is refused, and no use no further hope.

That is, he cares for no other girl, and in spite of what he can do it is impossible for him to make her reconsider.

What are your views on this case? Can you find no excuse for the most unfortunate bachelor?

DOUBTFUL.

Too Extravagant

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have often read with interest the beneficial advice and caution appearing under your name, but take issue with you when you urge all to marry.

You know that every city girl has one mission in life, and that is to have as much pleasure and enjoyment as is possible. This is, of course, pardonable when you reflect how hard one must work to make an ordinary living.

The average man is able to spend as much or more than he earns, and is a natural booster. The young lady becoming acquainted thoroughly enjoys his spending propensities, and refers with pride to his extravagance of his financial condition, and if she likes him usually marries.

Household drudgery has no especial charms for her, and regarding her cooking (?) the less said the better.

All this results in a relaxation of habits and morals, manners and everything else, and increasing divorce statistics show how the nightmare generally ends.

TO CURE WRINKLES

A NATURALLY dry skin is always liable to wrinkle early. The following treatment twice or often times a week will help to keep the wrinkles at bay: First wash the face thoroughly in warm water—and if you can soap, rinse in clear water afterward—then wipe dry. Next rub in a small quantity of good cold cream, let it remain on for about five minutes, then remove carefully with a soft rag. The skin will then be beautifully soft and supple.

ENGLAND'S MOST BEAUTIFUL MARCHIONESS AN AMERICAN

Once Flora Davis, "Dresden China Beauty of Washington Square"—Now Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava

Is Mother of Three Pretty Girls —Has Wished in Vain for an Heir

THE AMERICAN MARCHIONESS OF DUFFERIN AND AVA

ONE of the most beautiful American women married to a British nobleman is the Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, who was born Miss Flora Davis of New York.

In addition she is the mother of three of the prettiest children in England; but, disappointing fact, they are all girls. She has as yet no son to succeed to the numerous titles of her husband.

When she was Flora Davis she was known as the "Dresden China Beauty of Washington Square." Her gradual rise in rank is one of the most remarkable in the history of the British peerage. When she married the late Lord Dufferin's second son she became Lady Terence Blackwood, with no thought of higher rank in the future. Then the eldest son of the Marquis died in Africa, and she became Lady Claneboye. Countess of Ava. Then the Marquis himself died and her husband succeeded him. The former Lord Terence Blackwood is now Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, Earl of Dufferin and Ava, Viscount and Baron Claneboye of Claneboye in the County Down in the United Kingdom; Baron Dufferin and Claneboye in Ireland.

LOVE BLUNDERS OF JOHN CARTER

A Short Story

By Gaston Harvey

"WELL, I suppose this is the end of it." John Carter heaved a heavy sigh and strode along moodily. He then looked at him curiously and then asked:

"The end of what?"

"You know as well as I do to what I refer. To be perfectly plain, I hear it reported on very good authority that you are to marry the Monte Cristo, and that is what I mean when I say that I suppose we will not take any more walks together." He looked at her fiercely.

"I suppose it is but a further exemplification of the disappointment so often encountered where it says, 'To him who hath, it shall be given, and to him who hath not, it shall be taken away,' and I want to add that, even that which he may seem to have."

There was silence for a few moments. Helen reached out and plucked at a foxglove. She did not look at him. After a few moments she said in a low voice:

"You are getting bitter, John. Don't do it. It does not help you."

"Don't you think I have cause to be bitter?" A man can endure and stand a great deal more without giving evidence of his suffering, and there is still another degree of pain, which runs everything to gall. I have suffered that."

"You are very wrong to look at things that way," replied the woman. "What I take you to be bitter over? You possess youth and health, and strength, and with all these all those are priceless gifts. You are well thought of by everyone, and I am sure of one fact you will not be buried."

"Yes, what you say is true, but I have not the great essential—money. I might be a paralytic, and just have enough sense to keep out of a lunatic asylum, and enough morals to keep from being locked up as a common criminal, but if I had money all that would be overlooked, and I would be better thought of than I am now. As it is, I am not considered at all."

"Not considered by whom?"

"Everybody. And some one in particular whose I wish to consider me, and who has refused. I have tried everything once. I have placed myself at her feet. Love does not count."

Her Face Crimsoned

Her face was crimson. She looked far away over the sere, brown fields, and at last said:

"There what am I to deduce from that assertion it isn't clear?"

"You are not to deduce anything—I state it as my positive conviction that, given on the one hand a man with everything to make him desirable in the eyes of a woman, but with no money, and, on the other hand, a man with nothing to recommend him but money, a woman will choose the man with money nine times in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred. That's what I think of it."

"Why, John! Why, John!" There was an infinity of pain in these words.

"Yes, I mean it," he added. "I mean every word of it. Women are essentially selfish and they love the soft side of life. They know that money will make a soft side to anything and therefore they are on the side of money."

"I am sorry for you," she said simply. "I thought that you had a higher idea of women."

"Haven't I a right to be bitter?" he continued. "Don't I have a right to such an idea? If it has not been demonstrated to me, nothing has. There is nothing so convincing as personal experience, and it is from that I speak."

"I have known you a long time, John, and I know of no such instance in your career that you speak of. When was it?"

"You know very well to what I allude. You know that I have loved you for all these years—since we were little more than children. You know that my highest dream of earthly happiness was to some day make a home for you, where I could have you with me always. There has not been an ambition in my breast that was not caused by my wish to excel and make you proud of me."

"The rest of the world can go hang—you are my world, the all and all for me. And now, after all these years, all that counts for naught. There comes into your life a great, big, beefy man—you know little about him, except that he is very wealthy, and in the course of two months he undoes what I have done, or rather he has accomplishes what I could not in eighteen years. Is accomplish in six times as many years. Is not that evidence enough? What is to be deducted from that except what I have stated?"

"It is a mistaken notion you have, that John. You have accused me of a wretched thing that I would sell my life, my love, my soul, merely to provide myself with creature comforts. I don't know why I didn't make you leave me, and never permit you to speak to me again, except that I realize that your pain was carried away by your feelings. I realize what you say, that you are suffering, and there is an awful blow to such a state of things to an earnest man like you. But I do protest that any such state exists—that is, I mean—"

"You mean that you are not going to marry him?" There was light and life and hope in the question in a flash.

"Yes, I mean that; and that I have not intended to do so. And now let me do a little preaching to you: you have had your say, and you have said things you ought not to have said."

Men Mistaken

"It is a mistaken notion men have, that a woman wants to receive all and give nothing. True love is self-sacrificing, and bearing the burdens of those whom we do love, and nothing gives a woman so much pleasure as to suffer for the man she really cares for."

"Do you really mean that?" There was wonderment upon the face of the questioner.

"Yes."

"And there would be more women who would be glad to accept even the little in the way of wealth these sweethearts possess, if they were given the chance. Instead of going bravely to her and saying, 'I have little or nothing, but I love you, I can provide enough to keep us from starving, and enough to furnish us with clothes. More than that, I do not care for, with you at my side with everything is right.' The men stand off and saved about women wanting wealth. It is more weak, you see, weakness."

There was a long pause. The sun had sunk below the horizon, and the West was gorgeous with the quiet hues of the fading day. The couple stood a moment looking at the sunset. Perhaps it was the glory of the ruddy rays upon her face, or the reflection from the golden gates of the West that shone in her eyes. He paused for a moment irresolute, and then taking her hand, looked her full in the eyes. She looked down and her face flushed.

"Helen," he said, very gently, "I have almost nothing in the way of goods or wealth, but I have a love for you that the wealth of Midas could not buy. Will you accept what I have?"

She looked up and smiled softly.

"Why didn't you say that a year or so ago? Yes, I will."

HOW TO HAVE A SMALL WAIST

THE wasp waist, which is fashion's decree again, if properly developed is not an injurious as some, the ever ready cracker, would have us believe. On the contrary it is as it should be.

Try this. Plant the feet firmly on the floor about a foot apart. Then raise the chest up and out without moving the shoulders unnecessarily. Draw in the waist out of the skirt band still keeping the chest up and out without moving the shoulders unnecessarily. Draw in the waist out of the skirt band still keeping the feet on the floor. Wriggle out of it, the band, and there you are. The abdomen is down where it belongs, the chest, standing brings the shoulders back into their proper resting place and frankly, isn't it the most comfortable position you've ever tried? Your waist is quite small, a bit smaller, is tapering and is or will soon become quite what Madame Fashion dictates.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

Copyright, 1906, by American Journal-Examiner.

"DON'T I tell you? Of course, with Mr. Wynter away. It wouldn't have been much use to leave me to watch you, if he hadn't invested me with the power of acting promptly and effectively in his interests if the occasion demanded. Always business like, the boss," said Grieve's unctuous voice.

"But the packet, man!" interrupted Haggard hoarsely.

"Oh, there is a communication in it to Muir & Protheroe, the boss's solicitors, signed by himself, and I think there's that piece of Konrasein's, with the signature the boss didn't—er—remember writing. The packet is addressed to Muir & Protheroe, though it's in my possession at present. By the way, the boss's solicitors are smart people. You remember that bank case where a clerk was doing a little bit of betting—how quickly they plached him. I forgot what sentence he got; it was pretty stiff, though. As I was saying, Mr. Wynter put this packet into my hands, and I handed to the solicitors at once under certain circumstances——"

"You mean?"

"Why, for instance, if you were to neglect the business during the senior partner's absence by, say, taking a trip to the Argentine Republic, where I believe there is a difficulty in matters of extradition. Simply Mr. Wynter's telephone message explained all that?" said Grieve, in tones of polite interest, dropping into the armchair by the desk and stretching out his long, fleshless hands to the blaze. "Wonderful how cozy and fire is, even in August, sometimes."

Haggard remembered the words of that message only too well: "Attempt to fly from justice forfeits your bail." It had been no idle threat; Robert Wynter had left the man who was deputed to watch him armed with the means of enforcing that threat.

"Why talk in riddles?" he cried, and his voice sharp with its note of terrible anxiety betrayed the feverish dread clutching at his nerves. "In plain words——"

"Yes, plain words are the best," acquiesced Grieve easily from the depths of the padded chair. "I mean that I am instructed to have you arrested on the first signs of your attempting to fly."

"Why was I given the receipt at all? What is there to prevent my tearing up that which I am in the dark?"

"Yes, it does seem puzzling at first sight, doesn't it? Well, I'll let you behind the scenes in this matter, as the boss had urgent private reasons for wanting at all costs to retain that packet to have gone to the police would have detained him in New York, and he knows he had you safe. It will be useless your trying to bolt, my dear Mr. Haggard, should you refuse the hospitality I suggest. I have full power—"

"Curse you!" Haggard rose from his chair, his features convulsed with rage, his fists clenched instinctively.

He sat crouching over the blazing logs, whose wavering lights and shadows played with an almost weird effect upon the lean, fleshless face. Haggard saw the gleam of mocking triumph in the man's eyes. He would have to come to terms, of course; he was in a deft trick.

Moderate Demands

From Grieve's face Haggard glanced round the pleasant room. Luxury and comfort were its keynote, as in the whole house. Good pictures hung on the walls; a faint perfume of Russia bindings indicated an expensive taste in books.

Beyond the window lay the extensive gardens, that surrounded the old house, in which he took immense interest and pride.

All this—and more—was hanging in the balance. He had done that which might cause him to be dragged from this abode of luxury, to be cast into prison and tried in the community, to stand a criminal in the dock!

Could he escape from the closing trap if he threw in his lot with Grieve?

From behind the shelter of a few nights ago, Grieve was suddenly become a confident friend in his fate, perhaps the arbiter of his crisis.

Grieve's parting words on the last occasion when he was here flashed back on Haggard now:

"I have made up my mind to have an unusually long holiday—one quite unlike any I have spent before." And he realized that Grieve might mean an irony as to have escaped him at the time. He had been busy with all little contemplations of amusement, how Grieve would spend a holiday, the possible crimes he performed in the dull routine of his duties with such solicitude.

No Such a Man

Such a man did not live, Haggard had told himself; he ate, slept, worked—but the savor of life must be unknown to one seemingly devoid of emotions and joy.

One who knew nothing of the joy of taking a gambler's chance; Haggard had found difficulty in imagining how such a man would spend his money.

How utterly blind he had been!

Even then the crafty brain had been at work; the man had been stood revealed—the treacherous, cunning schemer, ready to betray the man who had gone away trusting him. If he could find a higher bidder for his secrets than Haggard, if he could do so in safety to himself, tell him, Philip Haggard, a higher bidder. A doubly dangerous man became a traitor ingrained.

"After all, my demands are very moderate," said Grieve, after a pause. "You are only asked to promote an old servant for meritorious conduct and long, faithful service."

He picked up the polished brass poker methodically and stirred the fire.

"You know, Haggard, accidents happen sometimes on voyages; and I believe I am the only person—I know I am the only person in America who is acquainted with what has happened. And the proof is all contained in one little packet." With the poker he withdrew still further the deep ravern that glowed red between the two logs. "That little packet addressed to Muir & Protheroe—there wouldn't be much left of it by five minutes if I dropped it in here, eh?" And as if instinctively his hand wandered to his breast pocket.

Grieve saw Haggard's eye gleam, and almost involuntarily the junior partner made a step forward.

There was the unconscious suggestion of a threat in the gesture, as if perceiving a thought that had flashed across this dewy fellow's brain.

Grieve laughed.

"Oh, I haven't it on me!" he cried, mockingly. "This that makes my pocket bulge out isn't the packet, you observe! I left the packet behind, with instructions that if I had not been seen to outside by anything should happen to me, or even if I should not return safely within the next day or so, it is a singularly prudent man, Haggard——"

"A quite misunderstood me," muttered Haggard, hoarsely, falling back a step. "If I am to gain by it——"

TO BE CONTINUED.

ROAST BEEF WITH YORKSHIRE PUDDING.

PREPARE the roast and put it into the oven. Make a batter of one plat of milk, four eggs well beaten, two cupfuls of flour, and a teaspoonful of salt. Mix thoroughly. Half an hour before the roast is done, pour the batter into the tin under the roast, and let the juice of the roast run upon it. After the roast is placed upon the dish for serving, cut the pudding into squares and serve it in a vegetable dish or as a garnish for the meat.

Choose Your Environment.

IT will make all the difference in the world to you whether you are with people who are watching for ability in you, people who believe in, encourage and praise you, or whether you are with those who are forever breaking your idols, blasting your hopes and throwing cold water on your aspirations.

USEFUL PINCUSHION POINTS

NO pin tray, however expensive or beautiful it may be, can take the place of the serviceable pincushion as an ornament or an article of use. The tray is easily upset, and when it is upset, so are the pins and so are we. The pins go in a dozen directions. The cushion is more staple. It may accidentally be turned upside down, but the pins stay and our temper remains undisturbed.

So, by planning the Summer campaign, be sure to took in a pincushion among your belongings. Fifteen cents buys one of the long, narrow sort which are most convenient for the carrying of spare pins in tucks, and a white muslin bowl doily with a bit of lace around the edge will make an attractive cover.

Those I prefer the soft pincushions. These are usually square and not much thicker than a sachet cushion. To make one, fold a piece of silk inches long by six wide in the center, sew the sides by a wadding, and tie here and there, after sewing, with baby ribbon. With baby ribbon fastening in pretty bows.

TIMELY CUT GLASS CUES

ON account of the richness of color and darkness of tone of mahogany, it makes an ideal setting for cut glass, as it brings out all of its colors.

* * *

There is no greater mistake than to place cut glass in front of a mirror or among highly colored surroundings. Much of its brilliancy and sparkle is lost in this way.

* * *

Every piece of cut glass should be at least twelve inches from any other piece.

* * *

Cut glass should be kept immaculate with frequent washings with soap and water and thorough rinsings in cold water.

* * *

The next best wood, if one has no mahogany, is dark oak, Flemish or bog, dark green or deep maroon color.

* * *

A cabinet with a mirror in the back when filled with cut glass only presents a confused mass of crystal.

POINTS ABOUT LINEN COLLARS

SMART as the linen collar undoubtedly is, it has its drawbacks in that the constant wearing of the same has a detrimental effect on the beauty of the throat and neck, inasmuch as it is impossible for the muscles to have full play. They therefore become relaxed and the throat falls into lines. Lines, being non-porous preventing any air from getting to the skin, which is therefore discolored. The action of starch, too, is said to have an unsightly effect upon the epidermis.

These disadvantages can be done away with, to a great extent, by wearing a collar a size larger than is absolutely necessary, and limiting the depth so that freedom of movement can be obtained. The neck and throat must be scrubbed nightly with a flesh-brush or loofah. Use plenty of hot water and soap and massage the neck and throat very thoroughly with cold cream afterward. In the morning douche with cold water, and do two or three simple head and neck exercises, such as bending the head gently backward and forward, then turning it slowly from side to side.

FRUIT JUICE KILLS GERMS

AN eminent Japanese bacteriologist has shown that the acids of lemons, apples and other fruits—citric acid, malic acid—are capable of destroying all kinds of disease germs. Cholera germs are killed in half an hour by lemon juice, even when considerably diluted. If you squeeze a lemon into a glass of water containing cholera germs, and let it stand fifteen or twenty minutes, you may drink the water with impunity, as the germs will be dead; these juices will kill other disease germs. Instead of telling a man to have his stomach washed out, we can now tell him to drink orange juice, which will cleanse the stomach as thoroughly as a stomach tube, provided it be not a case of gastric catarrh, in which there is a large amount of tenacious mucus adhering to the walls of the stomach, a stomach tube is also a necessity, as the mucus must be removed, but in ordinary cases lodge it is required, but for ordinary cases of biliousness, foul tongue, bad breath, sick headache and nervous headache, a fruit diet is a wonderful purifier.

SPRINGFIELD ROUSED BY ICE TRUST GREED

High Prices Without Warrant Have Stirred the People to Action.

GOVERNMENT OWNS POND

SPRINGFIELD, June 1.—Angered at the high prices charged for ice this Summer, the people of Springfield may petition the United States Government to prevent the ice cut from the Watershops pond, which it owns, passing into the hands of the ice trust here.

The Springfield Consolidated Ice Company, organized four years ago, with James M. Gill as president, controls 90 per cent. of the natural ice sold in this city. The Hygienic Ice Company, which sells artificial ice, is managed by John D. Gill, uncle of James M. Gill, so the ice business of this city is largely a family affair.

The Consolidated company pays the ice dealers 50 cents a ton for ice, which costs them only 15 cents by the ton to harvest, and this Summer ice is being retailed at $8 a ton. The open Winter is given as the excuse for the advance in price, but it has been shown that the supply of natural ice fell off only 20 per cent. The ice storehouses of the company are declared to be as full as ever they were at this season.

Get's Ice from Brewers.

The other Gill concern, the Hygienic Ice Company, buys its ice from the brewers. While the Consolidated has raised the price of retail ice to 40 cents a hundred, the Hygienic has begun to charge 45 cents for the same amount. James D. Gill, until this year, paid the Springfield brewers $2 a ton for ice and he sold it for $8. This year the brewers wanted more and added $1 a ton, and this increase has been promptly forwarded to the consumer, despite the great profit possible without one cent of advance.

The prices charged here for ice are as high as in New York city, where it is necessary to ship ice from Maine and New Hampshire. Nearly all of the natural ice used here is cut from the Watershops Pond, the property of the United States government.

The Consolidated Ice Company never paid a dividend, but its president, James Milton Gill, receives $4,200 a year for his services, and other officials are equally well paid. Nearly all of the small dealers have been driven out of business and the two Gill concerns have the markets of Springfield to themselves.

Ruined by the Trust.

The four big ice dealers in this city when the Consolidated was formed were Fred M. Flagg, Edward O. Doten, Isaiah House and George Emery. To-day House, who was prosperous when he sold out to the Gruet, taking a large block of stock, is driving an ice wagon for a living. Doten, who was forced to sell, is working as a day laborer for the city.

The Consolidated was organized under the laws of New Jersey and its capital is $100,000, of which it is alleged that George C. Gill of Holyoke, an uncle of James M. Gill, put up $25,000. In stock $25,000 was issued.

WOMAN'S LONG FAST IS FATAL

SUTTON, June 3.—That Mrs. Lovan M. Snow went without food for thirty-three days, during which time she kept the house in a wheel chair doing household work, was the report submitted by Medical Examiner Baker to District Attorney Tait to-day.

Mrs. Snow died last Sunday and her physician, Dr. Charles F. Smith, who was called to attend her on the thirty-third day of her fast, reported that she lived fifteen days after that day and that her death was due to exhaustion caused by lack of food.

Mrs. Snow told Dr. Smith that she had been trying an experiment, with the consent of her husband, Elias L. Snow, a well-to-do citizen, the purpose being to try the efficacy of fasting as a cure for stomach trouble. Mrs. Snow was seventy-eight years old and her husband is eighty-two.

PAPA MYERS TO SEE SON'S BRIDE TO-DAY

MRS. MYERS, WIFE OF HARVARD STUDENT.

This is the first picture printed of the young Cambridge woman who was secretly married to William Myers in Providence on Tuesday.

Harvard Student Returns to His Studies and Wife Is With Parents in Cambridge.

William R. Myers, the Harvard member who was married suddenly on Tuesday to Miss Mary E. L. Bosche of Cambridge, returned last night from Providence with his bride. Myers went to his college rooms and the woman went to the house of her parents in Seville street.

Myers, who is a Philadelphia man, graduates this month from the college. After that he expects to go to Philadelphia to live. He is said to be rather doubtful about the reception he will get at home, but despatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN from the Quaker City seem favorable. The father, William S. Myers, left that city last evening for Boston.

"Whether my son is married or not does not matter," said Mrs. Myers, "but if he were neither Mr. Myers nor myself would have the smallest objection. Miss Bosche is a charming and accomplished girl and a close friend of my daughter."

THE GREAT AUTO CHASE

CHAPTER XLVIII.

Ballara to the Rescue

MISS PIERCE was thoughtful for a moment.

"Well," she said at last, "it's because he believes Margaret Taylor's father, John Taylor, is a very rich man and the money will be useful when he inherits a title, as he will do ultimately from his English parentage. This title is that of Lord Lorenzi."

"Lord Lorenzi?" exclaimed Ballara.

"Yes, through a succession of deaths in the family, Culberson unexpectedly became next in line. The present Lord I believe is an eccentric old man, and nobody but his lawyer knows where he is living, but it is believed that he is in this country."

"Does Margaret Taylor, if she marries this man, will one day become Lady Lorenzi?"

"That is true, but I am sure she would sacrifice anything in order to escape the marriage, except the welfare of Edward West."

"And I have come to help her," declared Ballara emphatically. "She shall never marry Leonard Shuma if it is in my power to prevent it. Where is he now?"

"He is in Boston. They are to be married to-morrow."

"And after that?" inquired Ballara, eagerly.

"I believe he intends to take her away, but first they may go to Europe for a few days. But I don't know. The arrangements must be altered at any moment. Willard Culberson is not a man to reveal his true plans."

"And where is Margaret?"

"We are stopping at the very far away," replied Miss Pierce. "If you care to go with me we can be there in a very few minutes."

"Then we will go to her at once. I have a plan by which I think I can not only save her but revenge myself upon Leonard Shuma for the suffering he has caused us all. He has been very clever in his schemes in the past, but we shall now see if he can outwit Ballara as he did Sally Morgan."

In a short while they were on their way to see Margaret Taylor. As they passed a telegraph office Ballara went in and sent a wire to Joe Morgan.

They found Margaret sitting in an attitude of dull apathy. Outwardly she was calm, but it was the calmness of utter despair, and only her eyes betrayed the soul-racking emotions under which she was laboring. She clung to Ballara convulsively.

"Ah, my poor dear," murmured Ballara. "Why did you leave me? Didn't I say we were to be friends, and at the first sign of trouble you go away to bear it alone."

"I didn't know to what unhappiness I was going," sobbed Margaret. "I did not wish to bring any trouble into your life and I thought it better to leave you."

"And now you are going to ruin your life by marrying this man Culberson. You poor child. You don't know what you are doing."

"It is to—to save Edward," Margaret replied.

"To save rubbish," exclaimed Ballara in exasperation. "Edward West doesn't want any saving, and even if he did it is too big a price for you to pay. No, no, my dear. You are not going to marry Willard Culberson."

"But—I—must," sobbed Margaret, despairingly.

"And I say you shall not," insisted Ballara. "There is an old score to settle between this man and myself, and the time has now arrived to settle it. I have sworn that you shall not marry him, and I intend to keep that vow, so take that dismal look from your face and put your faith in me for a time."

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

FRIDAY, JUNE 1

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 1, 1906.

The Impudent Appearance of Carpet Baggers at Washington With Instructions From Wall Street and Credentials From the Democratic National Committee

The chairman of the Democratic National Committee, the notorious Tom Taggart, who maintains an institution for the revival of inebriates and a gambling house for their spoliation, has taken it upon himself to appoint an advisory committee to the Congressional Campaign Committee.

The advisory committee which Taggart has chosen is, as might be expected, made up of the representatives of the criminal corporations, and was dictated by THAT ELEMENT IN THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE WHICH BETRAYED THE DEMOCRACY AND MISREPRESENTED THE PEOPLE IN THE LAST PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN. SUCH A COMMITTEE HAS NO STANDING CONFERRED UPON IT BY POLITICAL PRECEDENT, NO POSITION WITH THE PEOPLE. THERE IS NO REASON FOR ITS EXISTENCE, NO OCCASION FOR ITS CREATION EXCEPT THE DETERMINATION OF THE CORPORATIONS TO SECURE POSSESSION OF PARTY MACHINERY EVERYWHERE. Whatever Tom Taggart's personal qualities may be, or however dubious his means of livelihood, he is chiefly unfitted to stand at the head of the Democratic organization because of his facile and eager willingness to serve as the tool of the corporations which controlled and betrayed the Democratic party in 1904.

Taggart appointed this so-called auxiliary, or advisory, committee to the Congressional Campaign Committee without any solicitation from the latter body, but at the dictates of the men who own him and his political services, and who send their orders to him from Wall street. Whom did he appoint?

The "Hon." J. M. Guffey, a lieutenant of the Standard Oil Company in Pennsylvania, where the Democratic machine is an adjunct to the Republican machine, and performs for the corporations the work that is too contemptible or too unprofitable for the Republican machine to touch. If there was a truly Democratic organization in Pennsylvania, Guffey would be known only for what he is—a political procurer for John D. Rockefeller.

Second, Roger Sullivan of Illinois, who is the brains of the most corrupt combination of political robbers known to the United States. He is not the tool, but the directing spirit of the Chicago Gas Trust. He was a lieutenant of the now bankrupt and indicted John R. Walsh. He has been the most dangerous opponent of municipal ownership that Chicago has known. He controls and dominates the men whom Chicago newspapers denounce as boodlers, but he himself shrewdly keeps as much in the background as the officers of the law and the courts will permit.

Third, McGraw of West Virginia, allied with the coal and the railroad trusts of that State, and political associate of the distinguishd Davis, who lost his own State so unanimously and contributed so liberally to the general Democratic disaster in the last campaign.

Fourth, Urey Woodson of Kentucky, who is now nothing in politics, but is willing to be anything, and is not particular. He is one of the minor assets of August Belmont.

Fifth, Ellyson of Virginia, known as a political train hand of the Southern Railway.

Of these and others like them is the advisory committee composed.

The people were just beginning to have a little confidence in the Democracy again. It is true this preference for Democracy was due more to the mistakes of the Republicans than to any particular worthiness or popularity in Democratic leadership. But such a committee appointed by a gambler and made up of stock jobbers, trust lawyers and parasites of trusts and of Wall street, is a notification to all sincere citizens that their interests will not be considered by the present organization of the so-called Democracy. Too clearly the same old, disreputable and discredited gang of corrupt politicians is again to prostitute the Democratic party to the service of the trusts.

Union labor, disgusted with the Republican party, has shown a growing disposition to support the Democracy. But what can union labor expect from a committee composed of trust representatives and trust employes?

What advisory committee or what advice is wanted from a National Committee whose incompetence can only be excused by an assumption of treachery, or whose treachery can only be condoned by an admission of incompetence.

The one piece of valuable advice this advisory committee can offer is that the Congressional Committee REJECT ITS IMPUDENT INTERFERENCE AND REPUDIATE ITS GAMBLING HOUSE KEEPER, ITS STANDARD OIL AGENT, ITS TRUST EDITOR, TRUST LAWYERS AND TRUST POLITICIANS WITH SCORN AND CONTEMPT.

Such action would be conspicuous and convincing evidence that the Congressional Committee intended to conduct its campaign in the interests of honest citizenship and without the interference of crooked politicians or the control of corrupt corporations.

"The Jungle," by Upton Sinclair, the book that exposed the awful conditions in the Chicago meat-packing houses, will begin running as a serial in to-morrow's BOSTON AMERICAN.

In Clover

THROUGH the office window stealing
Comes that foe to toil, Summer's hazy, lazy feeling
For the mother soil.
"Come," is whispered by the breezes,
"Go," the sparrows tweet.
And the country fields and treeses
Never seemed so sweet.

WHERE the lusty trout are leaping,
Where the wild flowers bloom,
Where the woolly bugs are creeping,
Where the buss-frogs boom—
Ah, to lie in lazy glory
On a sapphire day,
While the streamlet drones the story
Of its wimpling way!
To dream where not a thing is rotten
Save the fallen logs,
While the mulling world forgotten
Courses to the dogs.

HERE, no epigrams from Teddy;
Here, no honored thief;
Here, no affidavits ready
On Armour-plated beef;
Not a thought of muck or raker;
Not a speech from Taft;
Not the heelprint of a faker;
Not a sign of graft;
Not a word of financiering,
Nor of Wall Street's spoil;
Not a college-runner spearing
Gifts from Standard Oil;
Not a library from Andy
Anywhere we find;
Not a horse that looked the candy,
Coming in behind.

AH! But here we lie in clover,
Only dreams to make—
"EXTRA! Murder Trial's Over!"
Heigh-ho! It's time to wake!

When You

TALK about your ill health, it will make you less healthy. Worry about your work, it will make you less capable. Imagine you are disliked, it will make you less likable.

Find fault with others, it will make them faultier.

Anticipate evils, you will be sure to bring them upon you.

Talk much of what you are going to do, you will never do it.

Sit bemoaning the past, you will never get on in the future.

Complain of lack of opportunities, you'll miss what you have.

Wail bitterly that it is an unjust world and life not worth living, you'll find it come true for sure, in your own case at least.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Puts in a Plea for the Construction of Good Roads as an Aid to National Progress

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

AMERICA is just waking to its need of good roads.

When visiting the Pan-American Exposition I first learned of the great organization which existed for the promotion of this splendid movement.

England's good roads are justly famous, and in her West Indian island, Jamaica, they are a delight and benefit to native and tourist.

It is a curious fact that thousands of people in the country regard the building of good roads by town, city or government as an extravagance for the benefit of the rich, who drive in carriages and automobiles.

The real fact of the matter is that no one benefits so greatly from good highways as the farmer and the stock breeder and the country dwellers who are engaged in any kind of industry.

I can recall seasons in my early girlhood when there was despondency and gloom over the whole country neighborhood because of some sudden rise in the price of produce when the roads were absolutely impassable.

And before they could be safely used to transport the crops to market the price was certain to fall.

Perhaps it is because of my early recollection of bad roads and all the discomfort and loneliness they caused that a good road seems to me a thing of such beauty.

A closely shaven lawn, neatly kept, and a hard, smooth road always stir me with a peculiar sensation; something like to that which a sound of music or a sight of a beautiful picture or the reading of a great poem produces.

Life assumes new meaning, and a glamour and a halo fall over the commonplace.

A Great Contrast

I CAN remember when good roads first appealed to me.

My childhood home was on a Wisconsin prairie, twelve miles from a town; the roads were rarely good, depending upon long seasons of dry weather to be free from mudholes and hollows, and when dry and smooth they were covered with inch-deep dust.

Three or four times a year, perhaps, I drove into town with older members of the family, and as we approached the city the good roads began and the clipped lawns and all the face of the world and the atmosphere of life changed for me.

Hope, ambition, joy seemed to rise from those hard roads and smooth, green lawns and envelop me; the world grew larger; imagination was stimulated, and when, in addition to all this, a strain of music reached me from within some house by the wayside, or from some street organ, bringing romance with it, then indeed life became a thing so wonderful that it could scarcely be borne.

As we drove back homeward all these emotions faded as soon as the rough roads and ragged lawns appeared again.

And to this day the same feelings, to a degree, take possession of me when I pass from unkempt nature and see good roads and lawns which show the loving care of man.

I know that artists rave over tangled grasses and wild paths of nature, but to me uncut grass in a yard means tired men and women, overtaxed with duties for which they were not fitted by temperament, and to which they brought men and women, overtaxed with duties which left no time for the decorative and beautiful; the fields and barns, stables and pens must receive care; the front yard could wait, and it did wait, becoming and overgrown and neglected, to typify forever, in my mind, heart hunger and desolation.

Roads and Progress

JUST so the country road, with its humps and hollows and mud and dust, typifies poverty and misfortune and dissatisfaction and lack of progress.

It means isolation from companionship and distance from market, and waiting for letters, and discomfort in locomotion for man and beast.

And in contrast the clipped lawn and the good road mean time for pleasure and leisure hours of recreation and the enjoyment of life; music and laughter; communication with friends; the ability to go and come without exhausting all time and vitality; power for animal and man, and benefit to individual and community.

Yes, indeed, Miss Columbia, and Uncle Sam, give us good roads.

Give us money to build them and money to keep them in order.

Put all the unemployed upon their construction.

In every State and town and village let us have these highways built.

Let them run from place to place, silver ribbons by which the chariot of progress drives through the land.

The poor, the rich, the humble, the great, the people of to-day and the people of five hundred years to come will all be benefited.

It is a curious fact that of all the marvellous achievements of the Roman dynasty in surrounding countries, at the time of its greatness, nothing remains to-day but the good roads! Schools, temples, cities, aqueducts, institutions of learning, buildings of state—all are gone, but the good roads remain.

Let every man and woman and child in America clamor for good roads! What everybody wants must come.

Little Editorials from the People

READ "THE JUNGLE"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I had read "The Jungle" and was deeply moved by the appalling things told of in that book, but at the same time I could not believe that such things could really be until I read in the editorial in yesterday's BOSTON AMERICAN and the news of the investigation to which it called my attention. I could not believe that the packers and dealers of this country could stoop to such practices. I have no doubt in my mind now, however, and I feel sure that every reader of your paper will praise you and support you in your fight against such terrible conditions.
